RALSTON TO LEAD INDIANA DEMOCRATS

State Convention Names Ticket, Adopts Platform and Pledges Support to Marshall for President.

GOVERNOR IS GIVEN FINE OVATION

The complete text of Governor Marshall's address as chairman of the state convention will be found on pages 11 and 12.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—Indiana democracy came into her own again today when the state convention at Tomlinson hall named a ticket headed by Judge Samuel M. Ralston, of Lebanon, for governor, adopted a platform and pledged itself to Governor Marshall as "the first and only choice of the democracy of Indiana for the presidency."

Governor Marshall was given a tremendous ovation and there was a renewal of the terrific cheering when Senator Kern heralded the governor as "the next standard-bearer of national democracy."

Some Delegates Storm-Bound.

The storm which swept over Indiana last night had its effect upon the gathering of Hoosier democrats here today, and while most of the delegates had reached the city last evening, others delayed coming until today and found themselves storm-bound.

When the delegates walked to their seats, long before the convention had been called to order, they saw the prosaic walls of the hall and the cold pillars transformed into a brilliant mass of red, white and blue. The boxes of the gallery were draped in festoons of the national colors. These boxes were filled early in the day with the wives, daughters and friends of the delegates and the candidates. The feminine touch made the picture perfect. When Governor Marshall and Senators Kern and Shively appeared on the platform the men joined vigorously in the applause.

The appearance of the governor on the platform was the signal for prolonged cheering, the features of the boisterous delegates of a moment before fading in a sea of waving flags.

Ovation to Marshall.

Standing beneath a flaring banner proclaiming "Our Choice for President, Governor Marshall of Indiana," Governor Marshall today called the democratic state convention to order as temporary chairman.

The governor was greeted with a roar of applause from the throng in the hall when he was presented by Bernard Korbly, chairman of the state committee, as "the wise leader whom Indiana democracy will commend to the democratic national convention as its candidate for president"

The 1,700 delegates upon the floor, and the spectators as well, among whom were many women, arose and the cheering was hearty and prolonged.

Kern Starts It Anew.

At the conclusion of his address, Governor Marshall introduced as permanent chairman, Senator John W. Kern, who in the course of a brief address heralded the governor as "the next standard-bearer of national democracy," and predicted that he would "lead the hosts of progressive democracy to victory at the polls next November."

In adopting the report of the committee on organization, the convention chose delegates-at-large to the national convention at Baltimore Senator John W. Kern, Senator Benjamin F. Shively, National Committeemen Thomas Taggart and Major G. W. Menzies.

The Platform Adopted.

The platform in its principal planks, denounces "the protective tariff system, as inflicted on the country by the Payne-Aldrich act which has, through artificial prices, it fosters carried deprivation into millions of homes and tended to produce conditions of unmerited opulence and undeserved poverty."

To correct tariff abuses "application is demanded of the principle that custom house taxation shall be for public purposes only and not fro private gain, and that such taxation shall be limited to actual necessities of government."

The action of the house of representatives in passing the Sherwood pension bill is endorsed.

"Such amendments to present primary laws of Indiana as will insure honest and fair election of candidates to be voted on by the people," are favored.

The present "city and township unit" of local option is commended.

The administration of Governor Marshall is praised and Indiana delegates to the national convention are instructed "to present his name to that body as first and only choice of democracy of Indiana for nomination for president."

Bosse Names Ralston.

Samuel L. Ralston, of Lebanon, was nominated by acclamation for governor. On the call for candidates for the nomination for governor, Benjamin Bosse, of the First district, and earlier in the campaign in charge of the movement for Theodore Roosevelt for the governorship, presented Judge Ralston's name. Lieutenant Governor Frank J. Hall, of Rushville, was placed in nomination, but in a short speech Mr. Hall withdrew in favor of Judge Ralston. A motion was made to nominate Mr. Ralston by acclamation and it carried with a shout.

Did a Spectacular Stunt.

As Mr. Ralston was introduced by Chairman Kern as "the next governor of Indiana," a bomb was exploded in the lobby of the hall and a large portrait of Mr. Ralston wreathed with flags was lowered into view above the stage.

Mr. Ralston thanked the convention for the nomination. He declared that he wanted no man to support his candidacy under the delusion that he would "stand for loose morals or non-enforcement of law." He said he believed statutes should be either faithfully executed or repealed.

These Were Renominated.

The following officials were renominated by acclamation:

Secretary of State—Lew G. Ellingham, Decatur.

Auditor—W. H. O'Brien, Lawrenceburg.

Treasurer—H. Vollmer, Vincennes.

Attorney General—Thomas M. Honan, Seymour.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—Charles A. Greathouse, Indianapolis.

Statistician—Thomas W. Brolley, North Vernon.

First Contest Sprung.

The first contest of the convention was sprung when nominations for lieutenant governor were called for. Six names were presented—W. P. O'Neill, of Mishawaka; Clay W. Metsker, Plymouth; J. F. Denny, Portland; James W. Fortune, Jeffersonville; Leonard B. Clore, Franklin, and Dr. T. D. Scales, Boonville.

The aisles were at once crowded with friends of the candidates working among county delegations, and it was with difficulty that sufficient order was restored to permit the calling of the roll.

Of 1,747 votes in the convention, 874 were necessary for a choice.

Metsker Drops Out.

The first ballot resulted: O'Neill, 419½; Metsker, 154½; Denny, 228; Fortune, 291½; Clore, 325; Scales, 324.

Mr. Metsker announced his withdrawal after the first ballot.

The second ballot resulted: O'Neill, 616 3-5; Clore, 350; Fortune, 307; Scales, 301; Denny, 172.

On the third ballot O'Neill leaped far in the lead with 810 votes, lacking but 64 votes of victory.

Denny withdrew and it was regarded as a certainty that the Mishawaka man would win in the fourth ballot.

FORT WAYNE IN STORM'S GRIP AS SPRING ARRIVES

Rail and Interurban Traffic Hampered and Wire Service Crippled by Fall of Sleet and Snow.

The first day of spring made its arrival in the grasp of a storm of sufficient intensity to practically paralyze traffic and tie up communication in all parts of the middle west. The full force of the storm was felt in the southern part of the state and apparently Fort Wayne and northern Indiana were given a side-sweep as the precipitation here and the velocity of the wind recorded were below cities farther south. Interurban and steam railroad traffic is delayed from two to three hours and some of the lines operating into Fort Wayne had no cars moving during the early part of the day.

Although the official rule of King Winter is at an end, the storm of last night was one of the most severe of the entire winter. After two days of spring-like weather, a sudden change came Tuesday afternoon and the temperature dropped to a low record for this season of the year. First came heavy snow, followed closely by hail, which resulted in the greatest damage. The sleet was hard and dry at first, but later became damp, wrecking havoc to telegraph and telephone systems throughout the state. Few Indiana points were accessible from Fort Wayne by telephone today. Miles of poles have been carried down in the central part of the state.

Until early this afternoon telegraph offices were unable to get into communication with southern Indiana or Illinois and all of the messages from Indianapolis were relayed by way of Chicago. It is reported that the full force of the storm was centered between Indianapolis and Fort Wayne, as all of the towns between these two cities were cut off from communication. The Western Union company was able to get in touch with every point except Indianapolis directly, and forces of workmen were sent along the line, repairing the wires so that messages could be sent shortly after noon. The Postal company reports great trouble in the southern districts and all of its wire are heavy, seriously delaying communication.

Interurbans Are Hit.

All electric railway traffic was delayed between two and three hours. Interurban cars from Bluffton and Decatur, due in Fort Wayne at 7 this morning, did not arrive until 10 o'clock and the first car over the Lima division reached the city at 2:25 this afternoon.

The storm did the most damage on the western division of the lines operated by the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company. Several breaks in high tension are reported, but working crews have been sent out all along the line, and conditions are rapidly becoming normal. On the Bluffton division it is reported that cars are now running through as far as Muncie.

The "Aeroplane," a fast freight, leaving Indianapolis at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening, arrived in Fort Wayne at 10 o'clock this morning. This car is due in the city at midnight, but was held up south of Bluffton by high tension wires and sleet on the rails.

Democrats Delayed.

The storm apparently worked northward. The two special cars over the Fort Wayne & Northern Indiana Traction company carrying Allen county delegates to the democratic state convention, leaving here at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, did not reach Indianapolis until 6 o'clock last evening.

The best time during the morning was made by the Toledo & Chicago Interurban. Regular cars were operated over the division but two were between fifteen and twenty minutes late into Fort Wayne.

Fort Wayne city cars were operated on schedule time and only a little delay was experienced early this morning. The working crews were called out and soon had the tracks cleared in perfect condition.

Following the storm early in the aft-

More Miners Are Rescued from the Sans Bois Horror.

FIND MANY CORPSES

McCurtain, Okla., March 21.—Fourteen more workmen were rescued from Sans Bois mine today. This makes a total of 25 miners brought forth alive from workings that were wrecked yesterday by the fatal blast and cavein.

Fifteen corpses had been recovered up to noon. Estimates of number of men at work at the time of the explosion vary between 92 and 116. Appeal for aid for sufferers from the mine disaster was issued here today.

Supt. Brown, of the coal company, led the first rescue party into the mine but they could proceed no further than the sixth level because of the accumulation of debris. They returned to the surface with the body of John Colemas, a 17-year-old youth.

Rescue work was halted yesterday afternoon until the arrival of mine experts from the government station at McAlester, Okla. The systematic work of penetrating the mine was begun early last night. Half a hundred rescuers were worked in relays. They brought four bodies from the mine. The bearers of the bodies passed between rows of stricken relatives who clamored for a view of the dead. The bodies are all blackened and burned and are practically unrecognizable.

EXPECT LARGE SHRINE CLASS

Ceremonial Session Tomorrow of Mizpah Temple A. A. O. N. M. S.

CONVOCATION ENDS

The annual spring convocation of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of the Valley of Fort Wayne will close today after degrees from the twenty-ninth to the thirty-second have been conferred upon the class of seventy-six candidates. The gathering, which opened Tuesday morning, has been unusually well attended and many of the out of town masons will remain over until tomorrow night to attend the ceremonial session of Mizpah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.

The regular convocation banquet was held last evening in the dining hall of the cathedral and was enjoyed by several hundred members of the order. Ronald Dawson presided as toast master and the Rev. C. Claude Travis delivered the address to the new class, which was responded to by Hon. Peter Crumpacker, of Hammond, who acted as spokesman for the class. Ensign Rex Munselle, of the Salvation Army of America, also spoke briefly.

Ceremonial Session.

It is expected that at least one hundred pilgrims will make the journey across the hot sands of the desert at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon when Mizpah temple holds its ceremonial session. The caravan will be directed by Illustrious Director Albert S. Bond. A business meeting will be held at 11 o'clock in the morning for the purpose of receiving and balloting on petitions. The Arab patrol under the direction of Captain E. H. Kilbourne, will assist in the ceremonies.

The Shrine banquet will be held at 8 o'clock in the dining hall of the Scottish Rite Cathedral.

TAKEN AS BIG DIAMOND THIEF

Dannie Callahan Arrested by Federal Sleuths in St. Louis.

JOBS TOTAL $120,000

St. Louis, March 21.—Dannie Callahan was arrested today by postoffice inspectors, who say he is wanted for complicity in three big diamond robberies aggregating $120,000 and the robbery of the postoffice sub-station in St. Louis.

Inspector Bunsen says Callahan is being held as the leader of the gang which stole $100,000 worth of diamonds from Mrs. Mahlwin Drummond's stateroom on the steamship Amerika in February, 1911, and who bound and gagged two men and stole $10,000 worth of jewels from Edward Elberti's store, in Chicago, in April, 1911, and killed many persons in getting away.

WILLIAM MOELLERING DIES AT AGE OF NEAR 80 YEARS

Veteran Contractor Came to Fort Wayne Sixty Years Ago and Build Many Important Structures Here.

William Moellering, nearly eighty years of age, and a pioneer contractor and brick manufacturer of Northern Indiana, died early today at his residence, 420 Montgomery street, following a long illness from a complication of diseases.

Recognized in the local business community for many years for his fine ability and scrupulous integrity, the deceased made his mark in the commercial world, reared a large family and departed life leaving a record of which his surviving family can justly be proud.

Staring in life with no capital other than youth, strength and determination he succeeded in amassing a competency which he thoroughly enjoyed in his declining years. Until very recently he continued to manage the affairs of his brick industry and until his illness overtook him he was active in the business world.

Long Resident of City.

He left his home in Germany in 1853 and after sixty-three days on the ocean in a sailing vessel he landed in the United States and came immediately to Fort Wayne in August of the same year and had resided here continuously since that time.

He began life as a brick mason after he had thoroughly mastered the trade and by his frugality he began when young man to build a large contracting business to which his sons succeeded at his retirement.

Built Many Buildings.

During his long and noted career as a builder he erected some of the larges and most important structures in this part of the state and included in the list are:

Government building and postoffice here and at Lafayette, Ind.; the Indiana School for Feeble Minded Youth, the St. Pauls and Zions Lutheran churches, the St. Paul's Catholic church, the Reformed Orphans' Home, the Clay and many other public schools, seven of the Fire Engine Houses, the Centlivre and Berghoff Breweries, the Wayne Knitting Mills and many other large structures.

Born On Easter Sunday.

Mr. Moellering was born on Easter Sunday, April 7, 1832, at Haimsen, Kries Minden, Prussia; had he survived until Easter Sunday of this year he would have been eighty years of age. He was the son of August and Dorothea Moellering and was the only survivor of a large family.

The deceased was one of the oldest members of the congregation of St. Paul's Lutheran church and was consistent in his religious life up to the time of his death. He was married in 1856 to Anna Hambrock who died a short time after the celebration of the golden wedding anniversary on Feb. 12, 1906.

The surviving family consists of eight children who are: William F. Moellering, Mrs. Herman J. Lange, Henry F. Moellering, Mrs. Henry A. Gerberding, Charles E. Moellering, Mrs. G. H. Wehmeyer, Edward H. Moellering and Mrs. Clara Doehrman, all of this city.

Two daughters preceded him in death.

Funeral services Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house and 2:30 at the St. Paul's Lutheran church. It is requested that flowers be omitted.

ALLEN GANG IS NOT YET FOUND

Desperadoes Apparently No Nearer Capture Than Week Ago.

FIND A WRITTEN DEFI

Hillsville, Va., March 21.—Sidna Allen and his gang today apparently are no nearer capture than they were a week ago when they rode back to the mountains after the tragedy that blotted out the circuit court of Carroll county.

Posses have surrounded three different mountain strongholds in which the Allens were believed to have been run to cover, only to find that the outlaws either had escaped or had not been there at all.

The town is excited over a report that a party of the Allen gang rode to within three miles of Hillsville and placed a notice of their own beside the governor's proclamation offering rewards for the clansmen, dead or alive. The notice says: "You may get us in the end, but we'll get you first."

Mrs. Mary Haffner, of 330 Madison street, is seriously ill.

NO ABATEMENT IN THE CRISIS

Minimum Wage Bill in House of Commons is Unpopular.

STRIKE MAY BE LONG

London, March 21.—The crisis which has arisen over the minimum wage bill, introduced by Premier Asquith, in the house of commons to end the deadlock in British trade, caused by the national coal strike, continues.

Fear appears to be gaining that there will be considerable delay in passing the measure, even if it is not thrown out entirely and that the strike will be prolonged. Spread of this opinion has caused further consternation in industrial districts of the United Kingdom, where suffering is extreme.

It is now estimated that besides the million strikers on strike nearly two million other persons have been rendered idle.

Bert Keenan, a son of H. J. Keenan, of the Anthony hotel, returned to Howe Military academy today after a visit with his parents.

We Hope So, Too.

ALFRED KAMPE is four years old. He lives at the corner of West Jefferson and Van Buren streets. The other day he stood looking out of the sitting room window. He was very thoughtful. He seemed to be gazing at the landscape which was becoming whitened by the fall of large snowflakes—in fact it was the day of our last snowfall.

"What are you thinking about?" asked Alfred's mother.

"I was thinking about the snow," responded the lad.

"What were you thinking about the snow?"

There was a brief pause.

"I was thinking," came the explanation, "that God must be awful tired having it around, and he's probably getting rid of the last of it today."

* * *

Here's a little tale that comes from the south side:

Mrs. Charles M. Jones, wife of the local freight cashier of the Pennsylvania railroad, was looking everywhere about the kitchen of her home, 2132 Force street, for a certain strainer needed in the preparation of a part of their evening meal.

"What are you looking for?" asked her daughter, Mrs. Garnett Parry. Mrs. Jones was so busy in her search that she appeared not to hear the inquiry, which was soon repeated. Looking up from her search, Mrs. Jones responded:

"I'm looking for that strainer—and I can't understand where it could have gone."

"What is that in your left hand?" inquired Mrs. Parry.

"Well, now," responded Mrs. Jones, "how do you suppose that strainer ever got there without my knowing it?"

He Was Very Thoughtful.

ROOSEVELT MEN SURE OF SUPPORT

Expect Gigantic Audience to Hear Garfield Speak.

ON FRIDAY EVENING

Local Roosevelt boomers are confident that the meeting Friday night will produce conclusive evidence that the republicans of this district are strong for "Teddy's" nomination and it is feared that the assembly room of the court house will be too small to accomodate the crowd expected. Those who arranged the meeting were fortunate in securing their speaker Hon. James Rudolph Garfield, former secretary of commerce and labor and a member of the famous Roosevelt "tennis cabinet."

Mr. Garfield, who is a son of the late President James A. Garfield, has offered strong support for Roosevelt's third term and in fact is credited with being the original starter of the third term boom. This is the first time that Mr. Garfield ever appeared in Fort Wayne or northern Indiana and with his name on the program for the principal address a gigantic audience is expected.

An effort was made by Louis N. Litman, who is conducting the Roosevelt boom in the Twelfth district, to secure the Princess rink for the meeting, but the auditorium had been previously engaged and dates could not be cancelled.

Taft Men Meet Tonight.

The local Taft leaders will hold a meeting at the Anthony hotel this evening. It is said that while all Taft men are cordially invited the purpose of the meeting is to perfect the working organization rather than to make a demonstration for spectacular purposes.

RIVER DROPS TWO FEET.

Reading at Noon Shows Depth of Sixteen Feet.

Weather Observer W. S. Palmer states that the guage in the Maumee river at the Columbia street bridge registered a depth of 16.8 feet at noon today, or nearly two feet lower than at noon the previous day, when the reading was 18.7 feet. At 7 o'clock this morning the guage registered a depth of 17.5 feet. The water is rapidly receding and predictions of continued cold weather leads to the belief that the high water danger is really past. By the time warmer weather arrives and thawing continues the rivers will be low enough to carry the water poured into them by the thawing ice and snow.

HUNGRY TIMBER WOLF,

Marooned on Ice Floe, Seen on North Shore in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill., March 21.—Excitement was caused along the north shore yesterday by the appearance upon an ice floe of an immense gray timber wolf, gaunt with hunger. It had evidently come out of the woods in search of food and been caught when the ice broke up. The floe drifted out of sight last night with the beast pacing around the edges of his island.

PROPOSE FIGHT TO LAST DITCH

Roosevelt Headquarters at Indianapolis Will Not Close.

LIGHT ON THE FUNDS

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—The Indiana Roosevelt headquarters in the English hotel will be kept open until after the last of the district conventions for the selection of national convention delegates have been held. The active campaign, however, closed today. Five stenographers who have been engaged in addressing circular matter to be sent over the state are no longer needed and on this fact the Taft bureau built a story to the effect that the headquarters had been closed.

"Nobody knows better than the Taft managers that we will be on the job until the last gun is fired," said Edwin M. Lee, state Roosevelt manager. "This report of the closing of the headquarters is merely another of the numerous lies that the frightened Taft men are printing in their controlled newspapers for the purpose of attempting to discourage Roosevelt voters.

Hard to Discourage.

"But they will find that a Roosevelt man is the hardest fellow to discourage that they ever tackled. The republicans who favor the nomination of Col. Roosevelt, believe in the man and they believe in his policies. And they will fight for him to the end."

The campaign for delegates to the national republican convention practically closes in Indiana this week with the primaries to elect delegates to the district conventions. The Roosevelt managers are satisfied with the situation for they declare that they have perfected organizations in every district and will obtain delegates from at least nine of these. The Sixth district has been conceded to the Roosevelt men and the Taft men confidentially admit that they are beaten in at least one other district.

The Third, Fourth, Fifth and Eleventh district conventions will be held next Monday while the Second, Sixth, Eighth Ninth and Tenth will be on Thursday of next week. The Twelfth and Thirteenth district conventions hold over until April. The state convention for the selection of four delegates at large to the national convention will be held in Indianapolis next Tuesday.

Says He is Satisfied.

Edwin M. Lee, state manager of the Roosevelt campaign, is well satisfied with the district organizations and says that there is no doubt of the favorable outcome of next week's conventions. He says that it has been demonstrated to the Roosevelt republicans that there is a definite organization behind them and that if every Roosevelt man votes at the primaries, there will be a safe margin of Roosevelt delegates.

"It is a case of every Roosevelt republican voting," said Mr. Lee, "and there will be no longer any question of the strong sentiment in favor of Col. Roosevelt among Indiana republicans. The Taft managers have caused to be circulated over the country dishonest reports about the lack of Roosevelt sentiment in Indiana, based on the fact that the Taft men obtained delegates in the First and Seventh districts through fraud. But if we get a fair primary as we believe we will in the other districts, it will be apparent that there is a general demand for the nomination of Col. Roosevelt."

When she got home and went to remove the money it had vanished. Mrs. Rhoades is unable to account for the loss. The police were notified.

MOVES FOR NEW TRIAL.

Preacher Says Evidence Against Him Was Purchased.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 21.—Homer Castle, counsel for Rev. W. D. McFarland the Greenville, Tenn., minister convicted in connection with the death of his former secretary, Elsie Coe, today filed motion for a new trial.

He alleged that the testimony of Dr. Donnelly, who testified at the trial that McFarland had asked him to treat the girl, was purchased. The motion will be argued at the close of the present term of court.

Walter Engleman is Placed Under Arrest Once More.

Walter Engleman, a lad of nineteen, whose home is at Huntington, was arrested there today and will be brought here to answer a charge of having stolen some clothing from Benjamin Awe.

Some time ago he was in the city court for having taken about $9 of money he collected for the Merchants' Delivery company and Wilbur Carpenter, as special judge in the city court, passed up his case to give him a chance to reform.

CARD FROM MR. WAGNER.

Fort Wayne, March 21.—Editor Sentinel, City. Dear Sir: I just finished canvassing Pleasant township and every man affected by the ditch has signed the remonstrance with the exception of five or six, who will probably sign later. I give you this information so you may know how the people of Pleasant township stand on the Little River ditch assessments. I understand no one is actively canvassing Lafayette township, but that the people in that township will sign the remonstrance also, if they have the opportunity. There is ample time for remonstrating until the 29th of March.

Very truly,

SHORT WILL PUT ON THE RECORDS

Esdius Ludwick Disposes of His Property in a Few Words.

WILL IS PROBATED

Omitting the preface and signature and counting the dates as a word each, it took just thirty words for Edius Ludwick to dispose of his estate. His will has been placed on file and is as follows:

"I, the undersigned, do hereby bequeath to Mrs. Edius Ludwick, my wife, this 13th day of December, 1911, the following property to-wit: All my personal and real estate."

No schedule was filed with the will to show just how much the estate is valued at and the name does not appear in the county directory and no estimate of the value of the property disposed in the terse will was given in the records.

Other Wills Probated.

Under the will of Charlotte Kress a few small bequests to charity are provided for and after these have been paid the estate is to be divided, three-fifths going to Jacob Kress, a son, and the remainder to Catherine Mansdoerfer, a daughter. Rev. Philip Wambsganss is named as executor.

Called Her Baby Doll.

Clyde R. Rhamy said when he testified in the superior court before Judge R. B. Dreibelbiss today, that while he was in a hospital nursing his left hand that had been mangled while at work for the Pennsylvania company, Harry Zuber got on too friendly terms with his wife, Ruth Rhamy, a fact he discovered by means of a letter she received in which he called her baby doll. Both acknowledged their guilt, according to Rhamy's testimony, and he left her and entered suit for divorce. He said the wife had been married and divorced once before.

Asks for $5,000 Damages.

PLENTY OF BIDS IN SIGHT TODAY

At Least Seven Contracting Concerns Will Try for City Paving.

TO BEGIN EARLY

At least seven contracting concerns are expected to make bids for the city paving to be done during the summer as that many have asked for estimates and have signified they will try for parts of the work.

Bids will be opened at the meeting tonight of the board of public works and at a low estimate the total amount of work to be done will reach $100,000. One concern put up a certified check for $3,000 as a guarantee of good faith.

Asphalt, brick, creosote block and anchored concrete will be used in the paving of the streets and the board will let the contracts just as soon as possible so that work can be commenced early. The streets for which contracts are to be let are: Maiden Lane, from Main to Pearl; Walnut street, Fairfield to Miner; Kinnaird avenue, Fairfield to Broadway; Butler, Clinton to Lafayette; Harrison, Superior to Eureka; Fourth, Calhoun to Clinton; Lake avenue, Crescent to Walton; Harrison, from alley south of Grand street to Butler street; South Wayne avenue, Creighton to Organ; Harrison, Main to Superior; Wells, Superior to St. Mary's river, and Maumee avenue, from Walton to Warren.

The matter of paving Superior street from Calhoun to Wells is in the hands of the city council because the only resident property holder remonstrated.

CITY CHURCH NOT VITAL.

Wouldn't Be Missed if Rural Institutions Remained, Says Minister.

Sterling, Ill., March 21.—Rev. J. J. Mueller, of the Jordan Lutheran church, in a sermon, declared that if every church in the large cities would go to the wall there would be no particular loss to religion so long as the country churches remained. His remarks indicated that he believed the average city church to be a mass of intrigue and politics and that true religion is to be found only in the little country church. Mr. Mueller has handed his resignation to the church board.

SAYS HE SAW 'EM TAKE THE MONEY

Copper Testifies Against Four New Mexico Legislators.

STORY IS UNSHAKEN

Santa Fe, N. M., March 21.—Mounted Policeman A. A. Sena, who testified yesterday before the house committee of fifteen at the investigation of bribery charges against Representatives Lucero, Trujillo, Montoya and Cordova, underwent a severe cross examination, but his story was not shaken.

Sena told of having heard a conversation between Elfego Baca, the prosecuting witness, and the four defendants in a room at the Palace hotel, in which the defendants promised, he said, to vote for any candidate for the senate that Baca might designate.

Money Taken From Prisoners.

He declared when the money was passed that Baca clapped his hands as a signal, and the witnesses, Venceslao, Jaramillo and Jose D. Sena, who had been waiting in an adjoining bathroom, stepped in. The witness said he took the money, relating how part of it had been thrust under a bed quilt.

He told of recovering a $20 gold piece half an hour after the arrests, from the defendant Lucero, who had it in his vest pocket. Lucero, he said, explained its presence there by saying he was so frightened that he reached in his vest pocket for a toy pistol he was accustomed to carry there.

Sena testified that Lucero asked the forgiveness of Republican State Chairman Jaramill, saying if Jaramill wanted to cut his heart out he might do so.

Defense Alleges a Conspiracy.

Questions asked by the defense indicated that counsel for the accused will seek to show a conspiracy existed to get the four legislators out of the way because they would not vote in a certain way in the senatorial contest.

The men were arraigned before District Judge David J. Leahy. They waived preliminary examination and bail was fixed at $2,000 each.

ALLEGES ATTEMPT TO BRIBE.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—Delegate Smallwood, of Prince George's county, this afternoon in the house of delegates charged that a man, who was introduced to him as John O'Malley, offered him a bribe of $2,500 to vote against the local option bill.

John F. O'Malley, newly appointed state auditor, last night denied published stories that he was the O'Malley charged with approaching Smallwood. A committee was appointed to investigate the charge.

Mr. Smallwood said he was called into the lobby by Mr. O'Malley, who asked him how he stood on the local option proposition.

"I told him I was favorable to the bill," the statement continues. "Mr. O'Malley then asked me if $2,500 would change my vote. I told him yes. He said he would see me later. When I saw him again he told me to vote against the bill after it reached the third reading."

COLD RECEPTION.

Given to the Slashed Skirts by Dressmakers in Convention.

Chicago, Ill., March 21.—Feminine interest has been aroused over the popular slashed skirt of Paris, which has received a cold reception at the hands of the Dressmakers' club now in session here.

While the original slashed skirt was open at the side, displaying the hosiery of the wearer to the knee, the "Moirer," a modification of it to be displayed here, has a lace underskirt.

Another modification is to have a band of the same color, but not necessarily of the same material across the aperture that ordinarily would allow the stocking to be seen. The panier gown, with its "hitch" at the knees, has been the object of much comment. It is one of the modern variations of the hoop skirt.

KISS COSTS COUPLE $40.

Wife Assessed $15 for Not Preventing Man's $25 Osculation.

Fort Smith, Ark., March 21.—Forty dollars is a fair value of a kiss, according to Police Judge John Harrington. Abe Freeman was fined $25 when the husband of Mrs. Frank Smythe testified he caught Freeman kissing Mrs. Smythe. Smythe also had his wife arrested.

She testified Freeman stole the kiss from her. Freeman said she allowed him to kiss her. Because Mrs. Smythe did not prevent Freeman kissing her she was fined $15.

"This court does not intend to allow a kissing-bug epidemic," declared the court. "Next time a man comes before me charged with kissing a married woman, the kiss market is going to touch a new high price."

FUNERAL HERE SATURDAY.

Remains of Mrs. Mary A. Blee Arrive From Philadelphia.

Mary A., wife of Latham F. Blee, of Philadelphia, died very suddenly at her home in that city Monday evening, March 18. She was the eldest daughter of Mrs. Kilian Baker and was born and reared in Fort Wayne, having been educated at St. Augustine's academy and up until her marriage to Mr. Blee lived in Fort Wayne and claims many warm friends in her old home, who admired her for her sunny disposition and broad charity. But it was in the home circle as loving mother, daughter and sister that her retiring disposition forgot itself in untiring devotion to the ones she loved. She leaves her husband and three sons, the youngest fifteen years of age, besides her mother, five sisters and three brothers.

The remains will reach here from Philadelphia at 4 o'clock today and will be taken to the family home at 326 East Main street, from where the funeral services will be held Saturday morning at 8:30 and at 9 o'clock from the Cathedral.

SEEK TO SAVE YOUNG FOLK.

Child's Welfare League of Spokane Has Entertainment Scheme.

Spokane, Wash., Mar. 21.—The Child's Welfare League of Spokane will petition the park commissioners early in March to establish playgrounds with dance halls, theaters, social rooms and gymnasiums in various parts of the city, to provide entertainment and recreation for working men and women and children. Mrs. W. H. Page, chairman of a special committee delegated by the league to investigate the welfare of the juveniles, says in a report that the committee does not think reforms can be brought about by the sweep of a pen or a rising vote, adding: "Instead of trying to prosecute the owners of cafes and restaurants for selling liquor to minors and other places where people congregate we propose furnishing places of amusement that will attract the youth of the city and keep our young people away from places of unwholesome environment. If we furnish the right sort of entertainment for the working folk they will not go to the other resorts and with that end in view we shall present our needs to the park commissioners at their next meeting."

NO CANDIDATES ARE FOUND.

Voters of Quitham, Ga., Have to Look for Men to Run.

Quithan, Ga., March 21.—The game of politics is a tradition and is played for the love of it in North Georgia, but this is distinctly not the case in the average Georgia town.

The North Georgia men who come to South Georgia to live are impressed by this native indifference to politics. The city executive committee here has just issued a call for a meeting to arrange for an election of city officials in March. This recalls the fact that two years ago when the election was due there was no candidates for the city council and at a mass meeting a committee was appointed to canvass among suitable citizens and persuade them to run. In this way a board of aldermen was finally selected.

Washington, D. C., March 21.—Dr. Harvey W. Heated arguments ensued, and for a moment it looked as if blows might be passed.

NEEDY PEOPLE DEMANDING AID

Trustee Branning's Office Flooded With Appeals from Poor.

MANY ON SICK LIST

Township Trustee Henry E. Branning's office is flooded with demands for help from the poor people of the township and it is possible that the expenditures for aid this month will even exceed the total of February, the heaviest month in four years, when $710.15 was paid out for fuel, clothing and groceries.

An unusually large amount of sickness is reported and outside work is not opening up as it usually does in March, on account of the frost still in the ground. The few spring-like days early in the week brought temporary relief.

Washouts are reported from all parts of the township and while the water is still high, repairs cannot be made. Workmen have been engaged by the township to make temporary repairs along the country roads. The worst damage is reported from the south portion of the township, along the St. Mary's river.

HUNG HIMSELF IN BARN OF EMPLOYER

Edward Rowe, a Farm Hand, Committed Suicide by the Rope Route Near Warren.

Bluffton, Ind., March 21.—Edward Rowe, aged 28 years, employed as a farm hand, committed suicide yesterday by hanging himself in the barn of his employer, I. K. Clark, a farmer living in Jackson township, three miles southeast of Warren. The fact of his suicide was not discovered until a few hours after he had taken his life. He left the house soon after dinner and at 2:30 o'clock when Mr. Clark entered the barn he was horrified to find him dead.

The young man had placed a rope over a beam in the barn and had then wrapped one end around his neck, and had thrown his weight onto the rope. It had not been tied short enough to keep his feet off the floor, in fact the body was resting almost entirely on the knees, which rested on on the floor.

Death evidently had come hard, from strangulation, for the neck had not been broken, and the young man had grasped the rope in his hands, as though too late he had tried to free the suffocating pressure from his throat.

His parents live north of Warren. The young man's mind undoubtedly was affected. He had not appeared right for some time, and a few weeks ago wandered away and was found after a long search.

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair, and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

ANOTHER STEP TAKEN.

Another decisive step toward the ultimate construction of what has come to be known as the Toledo, Fort Wayne and Chicago barge canal was taken yesterday when the house of representatives Tuesday evening passed the rivers and harbors measure carrying with it the provision for a survey ing the passage of the measure.

News of the action was extremely gratifying to friends of the canal enterprise in Fort Wayne and elsewhere, and it supplies additional encouragement in the campaign that has been waged ceaselessly, though often against most discouraging difficulties, during the past three or four years. Congressman Cline could scarcely have given Fort Wayne better news than that contained in his telegram announcing the passage of the meaure.

That the wording of the resolution is guarded in no way militates against Fort Wayne. The survey is provided for an artificial waterway from Lake Erie at or near Toledo to the southerly end of Lake Michigan by way of the Maumee river and the city of Fort Wayne, "or other practicable route." It would have been unreasonable to expect a hard-and-fast provision that the canal must follow any prescribed route in advance of engineering reports which must after all determine not only the practicability of the general enterprise, but the precise route most advisable to follow as well. Messrs. P. A. Randall, C. S. Bash, Frank B. Taylor and other Fort Wayne champions of the canal movement have become convinced by their study of the situation that Fort Wayne can safely trust its case to a demonstration by the army engineering corps after an expert survey of the route or routes that have been suggested. Meanwhile, there is abundant reason for congratulation. The fight for the canal has been a long and tedious one, but it is a thing worth fighting for.

It is difficult to believe that there will be any protracted struggle between the coal operators and the miners' representatives regarding the new wage scale which is to replace the pact that comes to an end by the expiration of time limit on March 31. It is plainly apparent that neither miners nor operators desire a strike, and assuredly the public, which must suffer with the interests directly concerned, will view with scant toleration any unreasonable delay upon the part of either of the contestants in arriving at some agreement which will be fair to all interests involved. Modern tendency in dealing with problems of this kind is to meet them fairly and adjust them equitably. Let us hope there may be no prolonged struggle in this case.

Mr. LaFollette, as was to have been expected, "ran away" from both President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt in the North Dakota presidential preference primaries, and the Wisconsin senator is perhaps entitled to the most cheering evidence yet at hand indicating that he is really a candidate for the republican presidential nomination. Senator Dixon, who declares the result "a blow to Taft," and Representative McKinley, who observes that it was a pretty fair example of what the president denominated as a "soap-box primary," are demonstrating, also, that both Colonel Roosevelt and President Taft have chosen as campaign managers two of the finest explainers in the business.

Wiley, the pure food expert who has just resigned his place with the department of agriculture, ought to chemically analyze the boom which has been started for him by Governor Wilson's friends as the running mate of the distinguished scholar on the presidential ticket this fall. ---

The miscellaneous assortment of clubs, stones and brickbats hurled by those who were formerly his loving friends since he followed his hat into the ring a brief time ago have evidently convinced Colonel Roosevelt that he's going to have another "bully time" before this thing is over. The announcement is now made that the colonel has determined to extend his speech-making tour considerably beyond his original itinerary. Kansas City is to hear him, and one day is to be devoted to a high-speed tour of West Virginia.

Indianapolis believes it is making distinct progress in the abatement of the smoke nuisance, a work which has recently been undertaken in Fort Wayne in the appointment of a committee of skilled engineers to devise plans and assist in putting them in force to reduce the volume of unnecessary smoke which beclouds Fort Wayne. All the railroads operating locomotives in Indianapolis have now equipped them with smoke-preventing deviees, and are lending every possible assistance in seeing that rules adopted governing the firing of locomotives are enforced to the letter.

The New Jersey state senate has flatly rejected the resolution providing for an amendment to the state constitution extending the right of suffrage to women. That is about what one should have expected from New Jersey, but the fact that the resolution received but three votes takes on the aspect of adding insult to injury, and indicates that some of the New Jersey solons are likely to hear from it when they reach their own firesides again.

Closing his appeal for the indicted packers on trial in Chicago, Col. George T. Buckingham suggested that the beef barons ought in point of fact to be decorated with laural wreaths instead of being made targets in the government's anti-trust suits. Can it be possible we have been cruelly misjudging the beef barons and that the boost in the price of meat products which they control is not real but only imaginary?

AN INSIDIOUS INVASION.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

The assembled dressmakers at Chicago have let out the secret. The panier gown now being featured in the fashion plates is really intended to help back the hoopskirt. The fashion-makers, despairing of expanding the hobble into the hoop at once, have resolved upon effecting it by slow degrees. And the panier is the first step.

An examination of the origin of the panier will explain to the uninitiated. The name comes from the panniers that donkeys carry, the baskets slung at each side, in which the burden is borne. The dressmaker's panier is a short, gathered overskirt worn by the fashionable dame in the same way, producing a puff effect, which, of course, will call for wider skirts, and ultimately, they hope, the hoopskirt itself. From the panier to the hoop would be an easy transition, because the panier, exaggerated as it will be, will require hoop support, and after that the size of the hoop will depend upon the pleasure of the fashion-makers and the patience of the wearers.

This is the insidious invasion which the assembled conspirators at Chicago are intending to use as a preliminary accomplishment of their fell designs. But forewarned is forearned. The devotees of the hobble will now watch the development of the panier jealously. Restricted to its present style, it may be approved; but let them beware of the inevitable tendency to expand it, or the first thing they know the modified hoopskirt will be around them and the conspirators will triumph.

And touching on this topic, it has been suggested that the hoopskirt could never come back in these days of self-sufficient suffragist womanhood, to whom the hobble has been almost a badge of freedom from the heavy draperies of a less strenuous age. Are the dressmakers anti-suffragists at heart and seeking to enmesh the fair lovers of liberty once more in the trappings and trimmings of a hoopskirted and helpless femininity?

AUTOMOBILES FOR FARMERS.

(Grand Rapids Press.)

The third annual automobile show just held in Grand Rapids clearly demonstrated the fact that the horseless vehicle is growing immensely fast in public favor, and in no line is the interest greater than with the farmers. The auto has reached that stage in up-to-date farming that it has become nearly as indispensable as the sulky plow, the seeder and the reaper. Farming today to attain its greatest success is dependent upon economy of time. This is only attainable by the employment of those agencies that reduce waste of time and utilizes it in a way that helps to bring more speedy results.

The time was when a weekly mail sufficed for the farmer. The needs of his occupation has forced the daily rural route. Quicker communication with markets brought the rural phone service. More speedy transportation than by the horse has led to the employment of the auto. While it is true the interurban lines stretching out from the great cities have brought the farmers in certain sections in close touch with the business world, these lines have reached only a few. The complete transformation of farm life has been brought about rough the automobile, and now that prices have reached a solid value basis farmers will own one of these twentieth century vehicles.

Every year the sales to the tillers of the soil is increasing, not only the auto, but the motor market wagon as well. It is less than a dozen years since the auto began to be recognized as one of the best machines on the farm. The fad era has passed and that of utility has taken its place. Already it is recognized as essential to a well-equipped farm and its successful operation as is up-to-date farm machinery, and its use by farmers will continue to grow rather than diminish, for it is a service machine that is necessary in the modern system of farming.

THE OLD LOVE LETTER.

(Grand Rapids Press.)

A woman may burn her fingers on a curling iron, she may burn the biscuits, she may burn up the sidewalks looking for bargains, but there is one thing that she never will burn and that is a love letter. Many men have found this out to their sorrow. One of these men lives out in Kansas and he found it out just the other day when some love letters several years old were read in court and he was assessed for breach of promise.

It is not believed that in the entire history of the world a woman has willingly and with malice aforethought consigned a love letter to the flames or has torn it up or has cast it into the open sea. There is one class of men who do not know this and who absolutely refuse to have it pounded into their heads. They are the bachelors. But there is another class of men who do know this great truth— the married men. They have learned it by bitter experience. Nearly all of them have had their ancient and faded love letters thrust under their noses more than once by the party who used to be "cherry-lipped queen" or the "pride, the hope and the inspiration" of the poor, old, bald-headed galoot who has been supporting his "divinity" to the best of his ability. If the house is on fire, the love letters are always rescued. They seem to bear a charmed life and are as immortal as though they were carved upon granite.

HONORS FOR MAN POPE KNIGHTED

MANY ALUMNI THERE

Two hundred alumni from Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania were present. Judge Kavanaugh, Judge Scanlon, former Judge Clifford and Judge Gibbons, of the circuit court of Chicago, and Judge Funk, of the circuit court of South Bend, were among the guests.

The faculty and students appeared in cap and gown. On the stage were President Cavanaugh and the other officers of the university and the deans of the departments. Archbishop Moeller, of Cincinnati, presided.

The cadet battalion, under the command of Captain R. Stogsdall, U. S. A., appeared in full dress uniforms.

Addresses were made by:

Archbishop Moeller.

Shelbyville Man Suffers an Unusual Accident.

Shelbyville, Ind., March 21.—Harry G. Griffey has a potatoe fork prong wound in his right ear as an early momento of spring energy. Reaching for the fork, he stumbled, became overbalanced and fell to the floor. The fork jarred loose and fell; one of the prongs fastening Griffey's ear to the floor. He lost much blood before he could remove the prong from his ear and get a physician.

BACKACHE ALMOST UNBEARABLE.

Is an almost certain result of kidney trouble. D. Mooney, 803 E. Olive St., Bloomington, Ill., says: "I suffered with backache and pains in my kidneys which were almost unbearable. I gave Foley Kidney Pills a good trial, and they done wonders for me. Today I can do a real hard day's work and not feel the effects." Foley Kidney Pills will cure any case of kidney and bladder trouble not beyond the reach of medicine. No medicine can do more. Dreier Drug Co.

REAL FARMER AT FOURTEEN.

Baraboo, Wis., March 21.—Floyd Carpenter, 14 years of age, in all probability is the youngest farmer in the country, for that has been decided as his chosen profession. His father, George Carpenter, has purchased the Thomas Barker farm west o fthe city, and the boy will pay for it from the earnings of the place on the installment plan, having refused to accept any other terms.

The farm consists of 335 acres and the price was $18,200. Floyd will manage it himself and will be assisted by two families, there being two houses on the place. The land is well adapted to stock raising and general farming.

A Woman's Nerves

Dr. Baker in "The Gentle Lady."

A woman's nerves affect her spirits, her health and her beauty. Anemic blood—blood lacking in red corpuscles—is usually the cause of "bad nerves." Incorrect metabolism results in depleting the blood of its proper constituents.

Metabolism is the process of assimilation and elimination of the food and drink consumed. In other words, metabolism means the correct renewal and waste of the cells and tissues of the body. Seven women out of ten are anemic, this is plainly evident by their lack of beauty. A perfectly healthy woman; whose metabolism is correct is invariably plump, solid of flesh and beautiful. She will have pink cheeks, red lips, sparkling eyes and a wealth of waving hair. Such a woman is beautiful, even though her features are irregular.

We physicians in recent years have found through the research of a great German chemist—a peculiar fluid containing no alcohol or narcotic drugs, called "matabolinum," which if drunk twice daily for a few weeks and thereafter two or three times a week, will restore or correct metabolism. The correction of metabolism is all important if health and beauty are to be maintained. Scores of feminine ills are banished and forgotten as soon as the metabolism is restored. Unfortunately for the masses, the fluid, metabolinum, is too expensive. One dollar and twenty-five cents is charged by leading pharmacists in the larger cities for one pint of the concentrated metabolinum, but this, when diluted with water, makes fully one gallon. A wine glass twice daily for a few weeks often results in a wonderful change in the system. The wealthy classes in Europe and many famous actors, actresses, singers, musicians and society people are drinking this fluid two or three times a week to keep the nervous system correct and to preserve the lines and color of real beauty, which is often the chief asset of professional man or woman. Price, of course, is never considered by such people, as they are prone to "get what they want when they want it." In conclusion, if man or woman want health and beauty, color, vitality and strength, the metabolism of the body must first be corrected and then kept so.

JOHN OTIS, who came from Hingham, England, and with other settlers founded Hingham in Massachusetts, in 1635, also founded in this country the family which afterward produced James Otis, the Revolutionary statesman.

LAYS TROUBLE TO A $300 HAT

Girl Who Sued for Big Sum Says It Caused Alleged Slander.

SHE BLAMES GOSSIP

Chicago, March 21.—It was the luxury of a $300 aigrette-covered hat that caused all of Miss Esther Mercy's trouble at the University of Chicago, according to her own story.

The young woman went on the witness stand in Judge Pomeroy's court yesterday and told the details of her expulsion from the university.

Miss Mercy is suing Miss Marion Talbot, dean of women at the university, for $100,000 for slander. She asserts that the tongues of women at the institution of learning blackened her character and caused her to be deprived of the opportunity to get the education she sought.

Tells Life Story.

When Miss Mercy went on the witness stand she told the story of her life from the time she arrived here from Austria as a 2-year-old child. She told of her working as a school-teacher in the south and, finally, of her arrival in Chicago and enrollment at the university in 1905.

Then she reached the psychological moment in her career—the appearance of the $300 hat.

"I was living at the home of Mrs. M. von Jahn, who is a sister of Dean Albion W. Small," she said. "I went to get my hat one morning and found that all the aigrettes had been plucked off. I told Mrs. von Jahn about it and she demanded to know why I told her.

"She immediately became angry and threatened to call the police and have me arrested for saying that the aigrettes had been stolen. She said she was going to Dean Small about it. The next night Mrs. Small came into my room.

"'Did that hat cost $300?' she asked. 'A man gave you that hat. You are a fine looking girl to receive a hat from a man.'

Summoned by Dean.

"The next thing I heard of the affair was when I received a notice to come to the office of Miss Talbot. She told me to tell Dean Vincent about my loss, which I did. I told him of my conversation with Mrs. von Jahn and Mrs. Small also.

"When I returned to Miss Talbot's office she wanted to know if I had taken out a burglary policy.

"'We consider you mentally and morally unfit to remain here,' she added.

"Miss Talbot wanted to know why I wasn't married. I told her I didn't want to get married until after I had been graduated. She told me that was a poor answer. She ignored my answers and said I owed every big store in town.

Asked to Leave.

"Dean Vincent, who was present while this conversation was taking place, said that this was all damaging to me and said he wanted me to sever my connections with the university. I told him I had no reason to do that. He insisted, however, and said he would refund my tuition or would compel me to submit to an examination of my character."

Warren Reynolds, to whom Miss Mercy is engaged to be married, and Henry B. Mercy, brother of the young woman and a former student at the University of Chicago, also were witnesses. They told of another conference with Miss Talbot. Both repeated, substantially, the same conversation as did Miss Mercy.

HOPES TO SEE TRANSLATION.

Adventist—Elder Says All Will Go to Heaven Without Dying.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 21.—Elder Charles Thompson, of Nevada, Iowa, president of the Northern Union Conference of Seventh day Adventists, in an address to the delegates of the Iowa conference here declared that he is looking forward to the time when people shall be taken up bodily from the earth and transplanted directly to heaven without experiencing death.

This event the believes to be but a few years in the future. He stated that he will never die of old age, believing that Christ will return to earth before he is an old man.

BALD HEAD SPLITS FAMILY.

Man's Lack of Hair Causes Bride of One Day to Depart.

Buffalo, March 21.—Having declared she could not live with a bald-headed husband, Josephine Merlino was made defendant in a an action for separation brought by Salvatore Merlino, a cheese manufacturer, twenty years her senior. The husband was granted the decree. The ground was abandonment.

Several years ago Merlino's first wife died. He and Josephine were married November 20, and on November 21 she left him. One of Merlino's sons testified that his new stepmother, the day after the marriage, said to him:

"For heaven's sake go home and tell your father that I can not live with him another day. I never saw him with his hat off before, and I can not live with a bald-headed man."

Dressing Your Hair For the Evening

(Amy Lester in the New York Review.)

"Proper care of hair doesn't require drenching with water and scouring with soap, going around for hours with soggy hair hanging down the back, bringing on headaches and coaxing colds. Indeed, the less soap and water used on the hair the better, for alkali and moisture make the hair dull, brittle, coarse and dead looking.

"The true secret of keeping the scalp clean and the hair light and fluffy is the dry shampoo with certain beneficial ingredients. Put in a quart jar ½ pound corn meal and four ounces of amotone. Shake until thoroughly mixed. A beautiful cleansing powder with a delicate perfume will be the result. Powder the hair generously, then brush out thoroughly. This cleanses the scalp and hair roots, brings out the natural color of the hair, makes it soft and fluffy, and if continued regularly causes the hair to become long, thick and glossy, for amotone is a natural hair grower.

"This will supply you with sufficient shampoo powder to last for months."

DEXTER GOAD WOUNDED DURING SHOOTING

Herewith are shown some of the Allen clansmen who are figuring in the shooting affray at Hillsville, Va., wherein three court officials and two witnesses were killed. Henry Allen is a cousin of Floyd, the desperado who was the cause of the conflict, and young Floyd, who is shown here, is a son of the former. Dexter Goad is the clerk of the Carroll County Court where the shooting took place. He was shot in the left cheek, and is now reported to be in a serious condition. The general impression seems to prevail throughout the country that the homes of these mountaineers are mere tumble down shacks. That the contrary is the case will be seen by a glance at the accompanying photograph, which shows the $20,000 house of Sidna Allen, a younger brother of Floyd Allen, the wounded desperado.

WELL EMITS COLD BLAST.

Drill Opens Inexhaustible Supply of Air Instead of Water.

Goldendal, Wash., March 21. W. F. Steiner, a farmer residing in the Carp Lake district, a few miles north of this city, in drilling for artesian water on his farm met with a peculiar experience when the drill struck what was first thought to be an underground feeder to Carp Lake. The water not only rose to the surface, but was accompanied by a roaring sound that could be heard some fifty yards away.

Later in the night the water ceased flowing, and it was discovered that the drill had tapped a subterranean air passage and the air rushing to the surface had forced all the water from the hole, but a cold current of air still continues to escape from the opening with sufficient velocity to blow a man's hat off.

SOCIETY

The members of a sewing club to which Miss Bonnie Auger belongs were her guests this afternoon at a sewing party. There were eleven young women present. Miss Marie Scroggy and Miss Laurel Mariotte being two of the coming brides Spring is to have in her train, and for whom the company hemmed towels. Later the guests were seated at one table for a delicious supper. Dainty place cards in water color designs made pretty favors and at the close of the supper each guest was given a corsage bouquet of Killarney roses that had together formed the center decoration of the table. As the guests took the flowers someone discovered a tiny pink heart in the center of her bouquet. Then each one made a similar discovery and in gold letters on the heart were two initials A and C and on the inner side of the heart the date of May 18, 1912. That told these intimate friends of Miss Auger the story and congratulations were forthcoming. Miss Auger's fiance is Herbert Pierce Coverdale. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Coverdale, of this city, and is located in Chicago with the Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad company. Mr. Coverdale was graduated from Purdue in civil engineering and is a young man of good principle and many fine qualities. Miss Auger, familiarly known as Miss Bonnie, is as sweet and pretty as the flower for which she was named, Bon Siline Rose. She is a daughter of Mrs. Lydia Auger, is capable and efficient in many ways and is very much of a favorite with her many friends.

Mrs. Victor Russell was the honor guest today at a beautifully appointed luncheon given by Mrs. B. J. Griswold to members of the South Side Tennis and the Neighborly clubs. There were covers for twenty-eight and Mrs. Russell and some of her most intimate friends were seated at one table done in pink and white. Mrs. Griswold laid this special table in a handsome venise lace cloth over pink and at the corners placed large fluffy bows of pink tulle. There were no flowers on the table, but many pink and white carnations decorated the living room, where smaller tables were set. The place cards were pink and white in color and the luncheon menu, an elaborate and tempting one, displayed the same colors when possible.

A large bridge party was given by Mrs. John V. Reul today as a compliment to her guest, Mrs. Emma George, of Indianapolis, who has been a family friend for many years, and Mrs. J. M. Van Camp, who will soon leave Fort Wayne to reside elsewhere. Very pretty arrangements had been made by Mrs. Reul for the pleasure of her guests and they included music during the supper hour. Mrs. Charles Freistroffer and Dr. C. C. Kimmel sang at that time. Misses Della Paul and Bonnie Druhot assisted in serving the delicious supper and Miss Thelma Reul met the guests at the door when they arrived. Mrs. Reul was also assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. W. H. Schultz, and by Mrs. George Loesch. The colors that prevailed in decorations and the supper were pink and white. There were pots of blooming cineraras and many vases of pink and white carnations. Smilax festooned the mantles and pots of ferns furnished a background for the bright colors. At supper a noticeable pretty looking course was the serving of fruit in orange baskets with handles wound in smilax. Small flower cups of nuts added to the prettiness of the table. On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Reul will give a second party for Mrs. George.

LINGERIE FROCKS FOR SOUTHERN CLIMES.

FROM JAMES MCCUTCHEON AND CO. FROM GIMBEL BROS. FROM GIMBEL BROS.
PHOTOS BY JOEL FISHER.

THE lines of the lingerie frock are illustrated, which has a tunic drapery and panel at the back particularly graceful. The button and buttonhole motifs on belt and cuffs are an entirely new trimming note. These buttons are placed on bands of the voile and the buttonholes are made of satin tubing stitched flat. The sleeve is set in under the overbodice of embroidery.

Another frock is of cream net with touches of black. French dressmakers are adding deft touches of black to their lingerie costumes for summer wear, and these black touches are immensely chic. The frock pictured is of dotted cream net and Venetian lace, the tunic and deep capebertha being bordered with fringe. This deep bertha is caught to the lace bodice at front and back with four black velvet buttons, having cord loops also in black.

Broderie Anglais—the effective English eyelet embroidery—and a new cut out embroidery, are combined in the third frock. The bodice is simple in design and the straight tunic with its cut out panel, falls over a skirt of filet net, which has a double hem, each hem being run with black velvet ribbon and small velvet buttons repeating the black note at either side.

Some Little Resentments We All Have

Little Things in Life More Annoying Than Those of Bigger Import.

Most of us carry about certain resentments, certain grudges against the world, which can never be wiped out. No matter how well the world may treat us or how generous it may be subsequently, there was a time when it played us a shabby trick for which nothing can atone.

It may have been a matter of no material importance, but circumstances made it important. Do what we will we cannot forget it; strive as we may we cannot rid ourselves of the sense of injury.

You remember, perhaps, the man in Kipling's "Light That Failed," who was once given three cents in payment for a job worth twice that amount. That is an example of the kind of thing meant. Afterward the man made quite a lot of money, but nothing could ever give him back that three cents out of which the world had cheated him. No piles of dollars or comfortable packets of bank notes could do it. Always and to the end he was just three cents short.

Of course this sort of thing is quite unreasonable, but if you pause to think a moment you will remember that most of the really important things in our lives are unreasonable. All our fine frenzies of hate and love are unreasonable; our dreams are unreasonable, our visions, perhaps even the faith by virtue of which we live. Reason is left out of it altogether, and we do not trouble to concern ourselves with any serious thought of reason in connection with it.

For, besides being unreasonable, it is also incurable, as are all those other important things. This resentment is as fixed and as unescapable as all the rest. We cannot rid ourselves of it, nor heal the little pain which is brought by the thought of it. We condemn it, perhaps, with the cold, intellectual part of our minds, but we know that there is no virtue in that condemnation. It cannot relieve us of the pain or wipe out the memory of the past. That is fixed and unchangeable, nor can there be any compensation for it.

And that, perhaps, is as well. It may be good for us to be reminded that the past is irrevocable, that nothing can change what has been done.

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra Gives Beautiful Concert and Delights Audience.

The audience of music loving people who filled the Majestic theater last evening to attend the first concert in this city given by the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, left their seats reluctantly, with words of admiration and enthusiasm bubbling from their lips concerning the concert. Certainly it was a beautiful concert. That people appreciated the work of the orchestra and the soloists there was every evidence. Mr. Emil Oberhoffer, who may almost be called the orchestra, as he is responsible for their musical work, was called repeatedly to bow his acknowledgment of appreciation from the audience. A remarkable musician is Mr. Oberhoffer. His discipline is perfect and his command of his men rises to any height he may demand in a moment of abandon to musical interpretation and feeling. His poise is the more astonishing when it is observed the wonderful effects he has secured from the eighty men. Such sweeping tones as of one voice in the strings has likely never been excelled by any other orchestra. Never in this city have such effects been heard. In the second movement of the Caesar Franck symphony in D minor there were moments when the theme was caught up and repeated by violins, violas and 'cellos as delicately and quickly as the sunlight plays through the trees and the shadows dance from leaf to leaf. The entire number was a magnificent rendition of a beautiful composition. New beauties must have been recognized even by those to whom the work was familiar, though such could hardly be true of many people, for Fort Wayne has too few opportunities to hear orchestral concerts to make possible anything like an intimate acquaintance with works of the magnitude of those played by the Minneapolis men. That that was true was manifested by the uncontrolled applause that burst forth at the close of the Liszt rhapsody No. 2. There was a work that everyone knew something about and to some extent that was true of the Wagner prelude to "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," which was played in superb style. The splendid equipment of the men and the absolute command of them by Mr. Oberhoffer was greatly appreciated in the Wagner work. There was such grandeur of chords from the brasses and wood winds, such charm of color as the various motifs of the work appeared and reappeared, and such brilliance of musicianship as evoked the sincerest admiration and profound attention. Mr. Overhoffer's compelling baton and insistent left hand, which almost talks of itself, and the evident high order and abundance of temperamental quality he possesses, combined with the music, was inspiring. The close of the Wagner was a signal for tribute of appreciation in the way of applause. And what was true of that number was equally so and perhaps to a greater degree in the rendition of the Liszt rhapsody. The arrangement for orchestra was that by Doppler and a new and additional feature was the harp cadenza written by the performer of that instrument, Henry J. Williams, for the orchestra. It was brilliantly performed and seemed not unfitting in style to the rest of the work. At the close of the Liszt, which was the final number of the program, people gave no hint of going. Applause continued until after repeated bowings Mr. Oberhoffer consented to give one more number. The Dvorak Humoresque was the encore given. It was with reluctance then, that people donned their wraps to leave after hearing as remarkable a concert as was ever given in the city. No orchestra of such a number of players has ever been heard in Fort Wayne before. Two soloists appeared during the program. Madam Lucille Stevenson, a soprano, with a beautiful voice and a very handsome and pleasing presence, sang with considerable dramatic intensity and beauty an aria from Charpentier's "Louise" and as an encore "The Lark Now Leaves His Watery Nest," by Horatio Parker. Both songs are of great beauty and Mrs. Stevenson very evidently gave the utmost satisfaction. The other soloist of the evening made a still greater impression. He was Richard Czerwonky, concert meister of the orchestra. Mr. Czerwonky's tone is beautiful, his command of the difficult things in execution absolutely masterful and his interpretative ability of an order both artistic and musicianly. Mr. Czerwonky's first number was the gypsy airs by Sarasate and that so delighted the audience that they demanded more and still more. The second encore Mr. Czerwonky played to harp accompaniment, only. The Morning Musical society is responsible for the appearance of the Minneapolis orchestra in this city. Every season the society gives a number of artist recitals. This concert by the orchestra closes their season for the year beginning last October, so far as visiting musicians are concerned. The officers must have felt a high degree of satisfaction last evening at the success following their effort to have the Symphony orchestra for the audience was large and representative and the entire concert one of surpassing interest.

EVERY woman needs an inexpensive skirt for knockabout wear with tub shirt waists, and for this purpose a very excellent, new gored model is pictured. The pattern is cut along the most approved lines for spring and summer wear, and gives sufficient width at the lower edge to make it perfectly comfortable when walking. The model requires, for the average person, only four and three-quarter yards of thirty-six inch goods, and as a nice quality of woollen material can be had for from seventy-five cents to one dollar a yard it will be an inexpensive skirt if made at home. The design is equally good for developing heavy linen or cotton weaves, and the skirt will not sag at the lower edge when laundered if it is carefully made according to the directions on the pattern label.

For the majority of girls and women this skirt will not require fitting, but when alterations are necessary the changes must be made at the seams, taking up or letting out the goods an equal amount on each side. Under no consideration must darts be taken in the material at the waistline, or the set of the skirt will be ruined. The seams may be finished in the regular way and pressed open on the wrong side, or they can be stitched flat in tailor style. The belt should be adjustable and of the material.

LIGHTING THE HOUSE

Hints to Housekeepers of Care of Meters and Use of Lights.

We all trust that the time may come soon when electricity will be sufficiently cheap for all to have, as it is clean, robs the air of no oxygen and seems near perfection. Gas is superior to all but electricity for both lighting and cooking, being clean and easily managed, but it robs the air of much oxygen. It is said that one ordinary gas jet will consume as much air as two persons, a kerosene lamp as much as four and candles even more still than either. Anything that robs the air of oxygen vitiates it, as it is the oxygen in the air that gives it life. We all can recall the drowsiness that steals over us when we happen to be in a crowded, insufficiently ventilated room. Each human being can in one hour exhaust sufficient air to fill a room of ordinary size. When many are breathing the air of one room it is easy to see how readily the air will be made unfit for breathing, and all artificial lights add to this general condition. The more people and lights there are in a room the more fresh air from outside should be sent rushing in to keep up the necessary supply.

Know the Gas Meter.

As gas and electricity are both apt to fail at times it is well in building a house to have both provided, so that if one fails the other will always be ready.

Every housekeeper should learn how to read her gas meter. It is one of those things so simple when one knows how that it seems impossible for any one to be ignorant in the matter. Any one sent to read the meter will teach you how it is read or a visit to any gas office will give one the information.

There is some satisfaction in knowing how much gas one is using and paying for. Meters are sometimes defective and need connecting. Tips and burners need cleaning and renewing and it is essential that the stopcocks be firm.

Kerosene lights are more trouble to care for, but they give much better and steadier light for reading and sewing.

The wicks should be kept clean, often renewed and the best of oil bought. If one wishes the best light. Wicks with the outside edge curved and a tiny cut in the center will not flare and smoke. Kerosene, however, has its own dangers. While with gas it is our lives we must guard; with kerosene it is our property, for carelessness and ignorance may work great havoc.

Blowing Out Lights.

It cannot be too strongly stated that it is not the liquid in our lamps that we burn, but the gas rising from it, which is set free by the heat of the burning wick. It is gas quite as much as that which escapes from the open gas jet. Gas is a coal oil product, like naphtha and gasolene, which are inflammable at a very low heat. Knowing this, it is dangerous to blow down the chimney of a lamp in order to extinguish it. If the lamp is not fitted with an extinguisher raise the chimney and blow sideways, not down.

For the benefit of those who will persist in lighting the kitchen fire with kerosene it may be said that bits of wood saturated with oil may be used with absolute safety.

TURTLES YIELD LARGE PROFITS

One Fisherman Lands a Hundred Snappers in Catch.

DEMAND IS LARGE

McGregor, Ia., March 21.—One hundred and twenty-five live snapping turtles which weighed 1,229 pounds and netted their owner, W. T. Allen, a fisherman, $150, were brought across the Mississippi river from Prairie du Chien, Wis., to McGregor. They were in grain sacks and filled a bob sled box. At McGregor they were packed in barrels by W. N. C. Elwell, a fish merchant, and shipped to Philadelphia. Despite the fact that the turtles had been in a cellar without food or drink or care of any kind since the last of October, they were still game enough as they were put aboard the train to snap and bite with considerable belligerence. It is expected that they still will be alive when they reach Philadelphia.

Some of them weighed as much as twenty-five pounds. They were caught in one of the stagnant sloughs of the Mississippi the first of November. At the ice forming time in the fall it is the habit of turtles to the number of a score or more to seek out some sheltered spot near a bench of weeds or a sunken log and burrow in the mud beside it until their bodies are about half covered and their heads wholly so, there to remain until the ice goes out in the spring.

Mr. Allen, one of the oldest fishermen on the upper river, having observed this habit of the turtles, thought out a couple of years ago a simple way of turning it to profit.

Kept in a Cellar.

After the ice in the sloughs is strong enough to bear his weight he goes over the stagnant sloughs, finds the half-buried turtles, breaks through the ice, hooks them up through the hole, slings them in a sack over his shoulder and takes them home to his cellar. The cellar has a moist sandy floor. As soon as the turtles are deposited on it they burrow in the sand just as they did in their native habitat and there remain torpid through the long winter without requiring a single further thought from Mr. Allen.

When the price of turtle flesh reaches high mark he takes them out of their hibernating quarters and has marketed them as high as 13 cents a pound, live weight.

The turtle industry on the Upper Mississippi, though comparatively new, is assuming remarkable proportions. Literally millions of pounds have been shipped the last year. Every fish dealer on the river making the buying and selling of turtles a good-sized part of his fish business nowadays and the fishermen, instead of throwing the turtles back into the river which get caught in their nets as they did formerly, are now hunting them and saving even the smallest.

Five Varieties Caught.

Five varieties are caught—the big snapping turtles measuring fifteen inches across when eight or ten years old; the soft-shelled turtles, especially valuable because of the large gelatinous matter they contain; the terrapin, a small diamond-backed turtle of varied colors which sells at four and five dollars a dozen; and the Queens and Juniettas of about the same size as the terrapins, but of inferior quality.

Most of them are shipped to Philadelphia, though New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Boston all afford good markets. The price paid per pound by the eastern buyers runs from five cents in the summer to eighteen in the winter. As the turtles dress out only about one-third, at 18 cents live weight, the dressed meat is worth 54 cents a pound.

The turtle is so extraordinarily tenacious of life it is very easily handled and least perishable of any meats. In fact, it is more of a problem how to make dressed meat out of them than it is how to keep them from perishing. Remove their heads, the fishermen say, and they will live sometimes for a week afterward, even though on ice. Pack them headless in kegs in a refrigerator car and not infrequently they will still show life when they reach their destination. Decapitate them, skin them and dress them down to the last leg and that leg will still be kicking.

During the Lenten season the price of turtle flesh soars along with the price of fish and a large number of the Mississippi fishermen this winter have adopted the same plan as Mr. Allen, catching the turtles in November and keeping them in their cellars until now. It is found that they lose but slightly in weight.

SOME OF THE NOMINEES ON THE DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

LEW G. ELLINGHAM.

Lew G. Ellingham, renominated for Secretary of State after two years of most efficient service in that office, is a resident of Decatur. He is yet a young man. For many years prior to his election to office he was owner and editor of the Decatur Democrat and served as president of the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association. He was also a member of the State Central Committee. He is widely known and deservedly popular.

WILLIAM H. O'BRIEN.

William H. O'Brien, of Lawrenceburg, has again been nominated as the Democratic candidate for Auditor of State, an office which he has filled with great ability for two years. He is a business man in the best meaning of that term, with large financial interests, but in discharge of his duty as a citizen he served with marked credit as mayor of his city, as State senator and as chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Nominee for Governor

SAMUEL M. RALSTON.

Samuel Moffett Ralston was born in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, December 1, 1857. He is of Scottish-Irish descent. His father, John Ralston, was a native of "Old Virginia," and his mother, Sarah Ralston, nee Scott, was a native of Pennsylvania. In 1865 they moved to Owen County, Indiana, where the father owned and operated a large farm and dealt in live stock. While residing here Samuel did the usual work that falls to the lot of a boy on a farm. He always enjoyed working with the stock on the farm. He is a lover of animals. He felled trees, sawed logs and marketed lumber with ox teams. Afterward he worked at sinking a coal shaft and mining coal. With the assistance of one helper, he sunk with his own hands the first coal shafe that was put down at Fontanet, in Vigo County, and secured a horse, the first piece of property he ever owned, by his work at this mine. For several years he taught school.—He attended the Northern Indiana Normal College at Valparaiso and the Central Normal College at Danville, Indiana, being graduated from the scientific course of the latter institution August 1, 1884. He then took up the study of law at Spencer, Ind., and in June, 1886, he began the practice of his profession at Lebanon, where he has since lived. As a lawyer he has achieved a distinction equalled by but few men in the State.

WILLIAM H. VOLLMER.

For Treasurer of State, William H. Vollmer, of Vincennes, is the nominee for a second term. He is a farmer and business man of wide experience and success, and has been a most capable official. As a member of the State Board of Finance, serving with Governor Marshall and State Auditor O'Brien, he has done his full part in rescuing the treasury from the condition of bankruptcy created by Republican administration.

THOMAS W. BROLLEY.

Thomas W. Brolley, who has lifted the office of State Statistician to a high degree of efficiency and usefulness, is the nominee for a second term. His home is in North Vernon. Prior to his election to his present office he was for two terms a member of the General Assembly. Under his administration statistical compilations have been more carefully made than for years and the free employment bureau has been extended.

THOMAS M. HONAN.

Thomas M. Honan, of Seymour, chosen for a second term for Attorney General, has demonstrated his fitness for that office by splendid service during his first term. He graduated from the State University, afterward served as prosecuting attorney, was for three sessions a member of the General Assembly and was Speaker of the House of Representatives. During his service as Attorney General many matters of great importance to the State have been handled by him with signal ability and success.

CHARLES A. GREATHOUSE.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction, Charles A. Greathouse, of Mt. Vernon, has been nominated to succeed himself. He is a graduate of the University of Indiana. After his graduation he taught in the public schools and served several terms as county superintendent. He is now president of the State Teachers' Association. As a progressive educator he is known throughout the country, and his thoroughly capable administration of his office is conceded by all.

FEELS PITY FOR ANIMALS.

Illinois Pedestrian of Eccentric Habits Accordingly Bars Shoes.

Denver, Col., March 21.—Eli Hannah reached Denver recently wearing a pair of moccasins made of sack cloth, a suit of all-cotton fabric cotton cap somewhat resembling in shape as well as comparative size the top of a billiard cue. Hannah is walking cross-country, and his unusual raiment is due to his pity for animals, which pity also caused him to be a vegetarian for many years.

"I never have worn leather shoes since I was old enough to know that they came from the backs of poor dumb animals," he said. "That was thirty years ago."

Hannah is on his way to San Francisco. He said his stops long enough to paint a sign now and then, or to paint a farmer's barn, thus making his necessary expenses.

New Haven, Conn., March 21.—Henry D. Baker, Yale, 1896, American consult at Hobart, Tasmania, who has already sent several collections to the Yale university museum, has added another collection of birds and reptiles nearly or quite extinct on the globe.

The collection, gathered in New Zealand, includes a specimen of a wingless bird called kiwi, and of a reptile of the lizard type, called a tuatara, remarkable as having a rudimentary third eye.

Costs Only 10c. Cures Catarrh. No Longer a Secret.

The secret held by Dr. Price, of New York, for many years, before his death, was given to the medical profession and is not held as a secret. This is the simple remedy that can be procured at any drug store for 10 to 25 cents, and will actually cure catarrh with its persistent use.

The remedy is a germ killer. Dr. Price used and cured thousands free of charge, and proved to the medical profession that catarrh was caused by germs. If you have catarrh or cold in the head try it. Ask your druggist for a 10 or 25 cent box of Plex. The effects of Plex in destroying these catarrh germs is marvelous.

PLEX COMPLEXION PILLS act as a blood purifier and should be taken internally to get the alterative effects to assist in the cure of catarrh. A few doses will do more good than a dollar bottle of blood purifier.

This Home-Made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes a pint—enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

SAVED BY MISSING COMMA.

Judge Didn't Want to Try Doubtful Case Anyway.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 21.—Because of the omission of a comma in the revision of the statutes, the government lost its rights to try Mateo Ghio on a charge of attempt to commit murder on the high seas.

Judge Wellborn declared he did not want to decide on so fine a point, and dismissed the case on the broader ground of lack of jurisdiction. The ruling is of importance in that it establishes a precedent to govern the prosecution of future similar acts.

It was charged that Ghio, an Italian, shot Enrico Gastagnola, another fisherman of the same nationality, in the Santa Barbara channel a year ago, fully intending to kill him. The men are naturalized, and the act was committed on an Italian-owned boat.

GOES LIKELY TO FIGURE IN DEAL

Youngstown May Trade Him to Lancaster, Pa., for a Pitcher.

TWENTY-TWO LISTED

Youngstown, O., March 21.—Ed Goes, sold by the Terre Haute team in 1910, may figure in a deal between the Steelmen and Lancaster, Pa., of the Tri-State league.

If he is disposed of Pitcher Louis Schettler will be obtained in exchange, as he has announced he will not report to the Lancaster club. Manager Bill Phillips has had charge of the deal and it is likely that he will put it through.

Harry Symes, the slender youth whom Phillips obtained near the close of last season because of his great pitching record while with the Bellefonte academy, has signed with the Pittsburg club of the United States league, and it now an outlaw. This is according to an announcement made by Magnate Paul Powers.

The revised roster of the Steelmen shows that twenty-seven players are on the reserve list of the local club. Of this number three have yet to sign their contracts. They are Catcher Miller, Pitcher Cleary and Third Baseman Boucher. Three others of this list, probably, will not report. They are Pitchers Fitzwater and Symes and Infielder Kirchnick. Fitzwater is said to have given up baseball, while Symes has deserted organized ball for the new United States league, having signed a Pittsburg contract to play for Manager Deacon Phillippe. Kirchnick has a good position at his home in Cleveland and will not play professional ball.

Players Classified.

This leaves twenty-one players who have signed their contracts and who will be asked to report here about April 1 for spring practice. Of this number nine are pitchers, three catchers, two first basemen, one third baseman, two shortstops and four outfielders. No regular second baseman has been signed so far, Manager Phillips pinning his hopes on securing Sheer, from Washington, if he fails to make good, or one of the other recruit infielders trying for a position with the Senators. Following is the complete roster of the Steelmen:

Pitchers—Ainsworth, Cornelius, Swaney, Cleary, Kench, Boardman, Fitzwater, Symes, Drohan, Klingshon, Cross and Svenson.

Catchers—Orris Goes, Miller and Hergert.

First Basemen—Tate and Squibb.

Third Basemen—Boucher, Beeson and Kirchnick.

Shortstops—Scott and Sheehan.

Outfielders—Conway, Gray, Wood and Beswick.

Only thirteen players besides the manager will be carried through the season by the Steelmen. This means that fifteen men on the present roster will be found elsewhere than with the local club after the season gets fairly started. At least this is the present intention of Manager Phillips, who says it will be impossible to stay within the $2,000 per month salary limit with any larger number than that.

The thirteen players will be classified as follows: Two catchers, one first baseman, one second baseman, one third baseman, one shortstop, three outfielders and either three pitchers and a utility man exclusive of Manager-Pitcher Phillips or four pitchers and no utility man.

Out-door duds for the windy, rainy season.

GERMANIAS TAKE A TOUGH BATTLE

Wolf and Dessauer Five Kept Winners Up to Their Top Speed.

HAD A HARD FIGHT

Although the Germanias won two in three games from the Wolf & Dessauer five in the Fort Wayne Bowling association games at the Metropolitan alleys, they had to go at top speed from the first to the last ball to land the series and at the close there was but a difference of 19 pins.

Will Doehrman's good work saved his club from defeat in the first and second games when he rolled 212 and 232, respectively and got a total of 635 pins. Captain Leist was right behind him in the first with 205 and Ot Sander was up to his average, but both Schwartz and Merz fell down.

In the second game Schwartz redeemed himself with 230 and he got another double in the third, picking off 608 during the encounter. This didn't get him second high at that, because Tony Haas cut loose with 225 and 214 in his second and third and ran a total of 619. Frank Hill was second high man for the losers. The Germanias shot within 45 pins of their Chicago mark.

The Eclipse five rolled three good games and downed the Zurbuch Coal company's squad. The best work was done for the winning squad by Heine with 206 for high and Muhlenbruck who led the coal heavers. The scores:

Kenosha, March 21.—The aggressiveness of Eddie McGoorty of Oshkosh eliminated for the time being, Hugo Kelly from the middleweight championship race last night. McGoorty winning after ten hard fought rounds. Both men worked exceptionally fast, Kelly being the more clever, but McGoorty offset this cleverness by his hard hitting and forcing the mill.

Kelly featured the battle with a left jab and hook and a right uppercut which usually found its mark, but inflicted little damage. McGoorty did not land so often, but when he did connect the blow usually slowed Kelly. Each punch of the Oshkosh contender carried a sting, and that they hurt Kelly was evinced by his desire to clinch in the later rounds.

SIGNS UP CONTRACT

Zanesville, O., March 21.—At least one railroad running out of Kansas City has lost a valued employe by reason of the determination of one Red Schultz to draw his money every two weeks from the treasurer of the local club rather than wait a month for the pay car.

Schultz took up railroading as a steady occupation during the winter months and when a contract at a reduced salary was sent him he returned it and said he would stick to his position as "brakie" rather than play for less than he received last season.

The local management thought if he was of that frame of mind there was no use to bother about him and it began to pick up youngsters. When Schultz saw that his bluff was being quietly called he concluded that it would be better to work a couple of hours every fifth day than to risk his digits between the couplings, so he wrote that he had had a change of heart and his contract all signed, sealed and ready to deliver, is probably somewhere between here and Kansas City today.

Down this way the fans are looking for "Gloomy Gus" Hillinger to shake the snows of Fort Wayne from his feet and blow in here for a little visit before the training season opens. William was one of the first men to sign and send in his contract and as he is a popular player fandom was glad to hear he was in the fold.

One new twirler was added to the roster when the signed contract of Mr. Newmyer arrived and was filed by Manager William Kelly. He is a left hander and was last season with the Bay City club of the Texas league. Newmyer is a free agent, having been a victim of league rules, in which the Bay City club failed to abide by the reserve list clause. He comes highly recommended by Catcher Buck Weaver, who pronounces him the best southpaw he ever caught. He pitched in 30 games last season, winning 14 and losing 10. He struck out 166 batters and gave 50 bases on balls. He is at present in Denver, Col.

If "Molly" Kustus can do a "comeback" he will be one of the Athletic outfielders, as he has accepted terms with the locals, and he will sign a contract within a few days. Kustus was with the champion Evansville club of 1908 and at the close of the season was sold to the Brooklyn team where he played in several games. He was later sold to Rochester, but only played in a few games with that club. Illness prevented him from playing last season.

JOE RIVERS HAS FELT THE STING

Championship Bee Buzzed Around and Finally Stung Him Hard.

AFTER AD WOLGAST

Los Angeles, Cal., March 21.—Though he would be at a disadvantage in weight, Joe Rivers, the Mexican who knocked out Jack White here today is pointing with pride toward a match with Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion of the world. Promised a match by the king of the 133-pound division and with both Jimmy Coffroth and Tom McCrory ready to stage the go, Joe Levy, Rivers's manager, will visit Tom Jones, Wolgast's pilot, to effect a speedy signing. July 4 is thought to be a good date, this giving Ad time to get into shape and possibly engage in a short bout or two. Rivers says he can do the same to Ad that he did to White.

While waiting for Wolgast the Mexican is ready to hook up with Johnny Kilbane again. Strange, both White and Harry Gilmore, jr., are ready to back the Mexican against Kilbane.

White announces his intention of remaining in California and making at least one more fight here, figuring that his game showing against the all but invincible Mexican entitles him to another Vernon date.

"I never knew anything after I ran into that right hand wallop in the second round," explains Jack. "I did my best after that, but I could not make my real fight. I am sure that I can make good out here if given another chance."

"Rivers improves every time he steps into the ring," said Manager Harry Gilmore, jr., in paying tribute to White's recent opponent. "Say for me that I will bet $1,000 that Rivers can stop either Johnny Kilbane or Abe Attell inside of twenty rounds, if allowed to come in at the same weight he made Saturday."

Joe Rivers has nothing but praise for White's gameness, but declares Saturday's fight to have been the easiest one of his career.

I Cure Pelvic, Nervous and Chronic Diseases

Reduced Fees

For the purpose of proving the advantages of my methods in the treatment and cure of PELVIC, NERVOUS and CHRONIC disease, I will not only give to everyone who is anxious to obtain a cure and who will call at my office before APRIL 1ST a careful and thorough examination FREE of CHARGE, but to further demonstrate to the public the rapidity and thoroughness of the CURES I make, I will treat any case I accept for a CURE between now and APRIL 1St AT A GREATLY REDUCED FEE.

The warm summer months will soon be here, the time of the year when the hardest work is to be done.

Are you physically able to do your part and keep your place in the procession, or is there some disease which is slowly, but surely undermining your vitality and unfitting you for performing your part of the duties which every man owes to his country, to his neighbors, to his family, his loved ones and to himself?

Do you think you are doing your duty by neglecting an opportunity to rid yourself of the shackles of disease?

Every man who does less than he should do at his desk, in the shop or on the farm is weak in some way.

I have found that the man who is unable to accomplish all that he hopes or expects is often the silent sufferer from some PELVIC or CHRONIC disease which is slowly, but surely, wrecking his nervous system and as surely unfitting him for actively competing with his fellowmen.

We all have a duty to perform or an ambition to fulfill, and those who are weakest must inevitably drop behind.

Do you want to be one of these, or do you want to take your place in the world that nature intended you should?

Years of experience in the treatment of PELVIC, NERVOUS and CHRONIC diseases have enabled me to perfect methods which will not only cure these DEEP-SEATED diseases in which the ordinary methods have failed, but will restore to a normal and healthy condition the broken-down and devitalized NERVOUS system.

I PERSONALLY TREAT EVERY CASE MYSELF.

HUNDREDS of satisfied patients have testified to my ability to cure these CHRONIC and DEEP-SEATED diseases in which the ordinary methods have failed.

FREE EXAMINATION—To any sufferer who honestly desires to get well I will give a careful and thorough examination FREE OF CHARGE, and if your case is curable I will make my fee as low as possible and consistent with honest, scientific treatment. If you cannot be cured I will frankly tell you so, as I have no time to waste on incurable diseases.

I learn the exact condition of the rectum, the bladder and every organ of the genito-urinary system. This in itself is of the highest importance, inasmuch as a broken-down nervous system and many more of the troubles of the STOMACH, LIVER, HEART, KIDNEYS, ETC., are reflex and are the direct results of some PELVIC LESION OR DISEASE.

VARICOCELE, STRICTURE, RUPTURE, PILES, FISTULA, ETC., cured without knife and without detention from business.

BLOOD POISON—I use only the most advanced methods in the treatment of Blood Poison and kindred diseases.

ECZEMA and other skin diseases quickly cured.

PROSTATIC ENLARGEMENT results from inflammation. I reduce the enlargement and have been able to cure about 90 per cent. of the cases.

RUIT BY FLOOD AT LOGANSPORT

Total Damage in the City Expected to Exceed $50,000.

WEEKS TO REMOVE IT

Logansport, Ind., March 21.—Damage estimated at more than $50,000 was done Tuesday, when the ice in the Eel river went out and the water overflowed the banks and converted Race, Bringhurst, Miles and Douglass streets into a raging torrent; swept through the municipal electric light and waterworks plants and put them out of commission, and inundated one-third of the business district of the city. Fortunately no lives were lost, but many narrow escapes and many thrilling rescues were effected.

Today, in the wake of the flood, ruin is to be seen at every turn. Residence and business streets are blocked with ice cakes, from two to three feet in thickness. Traffic is impossible, and it will be days before the ice can be removed. Some of the cakes are twenty and twenty-five feet in diameter. Wedged among them are fallen telephone and telegraph poles, fences, beds, articles of furniture and timbers.

Houses Battered by Ice.

Houses with sides battered are resting a dozen feet from their original foundations. Others have been stripped of porches and rear additions and some of them are so surrounded by massive ice cakes that they are almost buried from sight. The Jeanerritte ice house was so battered that the roof sagged about ten feet and the whole structure now threatens to collapse.

The flood yesterday was unprecedented in the history of Logansport. Danger came at a point where it was least expected and it caught the residents unprepared. A flood was expected when the ice went out, but it was thought Eel river avenue and High street and the business district would be the only places to suffer. But instead, when the gorge at the Twenty-fourth street bridge, which had existed for several days, broke, the water overflowed the banks at Nineteenth and Miles street, where the river turns to the north and sweeping down Miles, spread quickly to Douglass and Race and then rushed through the city. It took in portions of High and Bringhurst streets and cut a swath through the city, which in some places, reached back nearly a quarter of a mile from the normal bank of the river.

Crushed Everything in the Way.

Huge cakes of ice two and three feet in thickness and from ten to thirty feet in breadth, were carried along by the rushing waters and battered and crushed everything in their path. Telegraph poles were snapped off at the ground like pipe stems; houses were carried off their foundations; outhouses were carried away and everything movable was carried along with the rush of water and ice. The flood came so quickly that the water was in many of the houses before the occupants knew their danger.

Hundreds of people who had congregated near the headgates of the race leading to the waterworks plant, narrowly escaped death. They stood watching the ice go down the swollen river, all unconscious of the fact that the river had formed a new channel, a half mile to the east and the water was sweeping down at their rear, hemming them between it and the river.

When the alarm was given a wild rush was made for high ground. Men and women were forced to wade through the swirling water, waist deep. Several fell, but were caught up by nearby companions and plodded to high ground.

Three Women Climb Trees.

Mrs. Jesse Jared, Mrs. Kate Sheridan and Miss Lena Johnston hesitated about plunging into the water with the others, and in a few moments the water was so filled with ice that they dared not venture the trip. Fortunately, they were near a low branched tree and with much difficulty they climbed into the branches of this. Huge cakes of ice struck against the tree, threatening to uproot and send it along with the rest of the debris, but it withstood the battering, and Larry Alden, a rural mail carrier, finally rescued them. He obtained a boat and, despite the danger, rowed out to the tree and got two of the women into the boat. It was tossed and thrown about by the ice, but it escaped being crushed and Alden and the two women landed safely. One of the city firemen went out in the boat and got the other.

Men and Women Race for Safety.

The most spectacular incident of the flood was the race between a score of men and women with the rushing ice and water. These people were on a narrow strip of ground, twenty-five feet wide, between the river and the water works race, watching the ice come down the river. When the ice broke the headgates of the race and the water rushed through, the sightseers started back for the water works. The distance is about two hundred yards. Men, women and children ran pell-mell for the plant, but the rushing water and ice beat them. It tore out the floodgates at the plant and swept out the bridge leading from the plant to Bringhurst street, and the fleeing sightseers were cut off.

The water overflowed the race, swept into the electric light and water works plants and covered the floors to a depth of two feet. Fires in the boilers were extinguished and the marooned sightseers were forced to mount to the high places. The electric light plant machinery was so damaged that only an auxiliary plant could be worked at night, and there were no street lights and in the majority of business houses and homes candles and coal oil lamps were burned. Afternoon newspapers which depended on electricity for power were forced to set their type by hand, and it was late in the evening before the editions could be run off.

Marooned on a Bridge.

About one hundred and fifty people were marooned on the Sixth street bridge. They gathered there to see the ice go out and before they realized it, water shot down the streets at each end of the structure and their escape was cut off. The water in the river had almost reached the flooring and the situation became critical. The flood that swept past either end of the bridge was from three to four feet and was so swift that none dared to brave it.

There were many children among those gathered on the bridge and they and the women became panicky. With the water in the river rising rapidly, and the ice threatening to batter it off its foundation, the work of rescue was started. Horses and wagons were pressed into service and these were driven into the rushing torrent. The women were loaded into the wagons and were carried to safety. However, before all had been taken off the bridge the water began to subside.

Narrow Escape of a Girl.

Water reached a height of seven feet in the home of John Williams, in Douglass street. William's mother, seventy-two years old, is a cripple and she was rescued after water two feet deep had surrounded the house. Miss Cora Maxy, of South Bend, who was visiting at the house, attempted to wade through the water. She was struck by a big ice cake and fell on top of it. Seated on the rushing ice cake, the girl was carried a distance of three blocks and escaped when the floe struck a tree. She was thrown against a house and crawled through a broken window into a room that was three feet deep with water. The girl got out the back way. She intended to leave for home in the evening and had packed her trunk. In the evening she was found about six blocks from the Williams house.

City Hall Surrounded.

In the business section of the city water reached to Third and Broadway and surrounded the city hall and police headquarters. Eel River avenue, High and North streets were under water. Water reached the courthouse and almost surrounded it.

About a mile of the Butler division of the Vandalia's tracks, east of the city, were torn up and undermined.

About one hundred families were driven from their homes and found shelter during the night with others. Some of them, however, had to be cared for by the township. These people have lost all their possessions and are in a destitute condition. The Logansport Commercial club, realizing their condition, met in special session last night and voted to give $100 toward a fund for their benefit. A relief fund will be started.

Is too often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat, N. J., was troubled with a severe la grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound can't be beat." COULDN'T FOOL THIS WIDOW.

Suitor is Turned Down Because Another Wrote For Him.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., March 21.—Because he could not write his name and induced a friend to write for him and ask a widow if he might call on her, Valentine Gammons, a widower of 50, will not get married.

Being lonely and in need of a helpmate, Gammons asked a friend to write a "flowery" note to Mrs. Rebecca Ramsey asking if he might call.

A favorable answer came back and he presented himself, soon making great headway at his court.

It was later learned by her that he had not written the note at all. Then she grew angry and refused to see him.

It was then that the widow made up her mind not to wed, but instead went to Tennessee for a visit with a relative, because he had fooled her.

Tightens Her Skin— Loses Her Wrinkles

(From Social Mixer.)

"I want to tell you how easily I got rid of my wrinkles," writes Lucile Marsh. "While in London a friend, much envied because of her youthful looks, gave me a formula for a home-made preparation which has the effect of instantly tightening the skin, thus smoothing out wrinkles and furrows.

"The principal ingredient is powdered saxolite, which can be had at drug stores here. An ounce of saxolite is dissolved in a half pint witch hazel. After bathing my face in this but once the transformation was so marvelous I looked years younger. Even the deep crow's feet were affected, and the annoying creases about my neck. It seems difficult to believe anything could produce such results. Several to whom I recommended the recipe have been similarly helped, one an elderly lady whose cheeks had become quite baggy."

LOREE MAKES A BITTER ATTACK

Railroad Man Assails Labor Unions as Cruel Persecutors.

USES HARSH TERMS

Chicago, March 21.—That organized labor is making a systematic attempt to undermine all the efforts that civilization has made for the preservation of order was the statement made in an address by L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson railroad, at the annual dinner of the American Railway Engineering association last evening at the Congress hotel.

It was regarded as one of the most blistering attacks ever made on trade unionism by a railroad official and evoked intense interest. Mr. Loree likened unionists to anarchists and urged the railroads to meet a critical situation by establishing a permanent committee to consider questions of organization, discipline and equipment of forces for various kinds of labor. Mr. Loree was unable to attend and his address on "Labor Unionism" was read by George H. Burgess, chief engineer of the Delaware and Hudson road.

Unions Held Persecutors.

In one of his broadsides at labor organizations President Loree declared that "the trade unions display the same intolerance, the same extreme claims for superior rights and the same ferocious cruelty that characterized the persecuting sects.

"By their opposition to home work," he added, "by separate arrangements with particular employes, profit-sharing, pension funds, employes' benefit societies and similar efforts to bring about mutuality of interest, trade unions are instinctively biased and consistently work to bring about a horizontal cleavage of society. Any one enmeshed in their particular strata would then find escape impossible; all the worst features of the caste system would be invoked and the chief merit of democracy, which is the open passage from the lowest to the highest position in the community, would be defeated."

Mr. Loree pointed out that trade unions maintain lobbies at every session of state legislatures and of congress and have caused many laws to be passed that have worked harm. He further accused them of lack of responsibility in keeping agreements with employers.

Decries Strike Disorders.

In speaking of strikes and boycotts he said:

"The effectiveness of the strike would appear to depend upon disorder, violence and crime which have distinguished it in all countries at all times and among all unions. The unions have never undertaken to discipline or expel members known to have resorted to violence, nor have they in any way assisted the authorities in preventing such action or in punishing it when committed; and their uniform denunciation of the courts with their injunctions, the navy, the army and the militia, the sheriff with his posse comitatus, the police and even the Boy Scouts indicate a systematic effort to weaken all the resources that civilization has developed for the preservation of order."

Since 1889, he asserted, the whole trade union world has been drifting toward socialism, and he asked whether the country has a condition of labor professionally organized or one of organized labor; whether unionism is not being exploited for "the benefit of its rulers."

Urges Valuation of Labor.

Mr. Loree urged a plan of undertaking a physical valuation of labor, saying:

"Were this done it would probably be found that in most industries the wages of labor are already substantially in excess of the contribution made by labor to the value of the product. It is a realization of this that is at the bottom of the contention of the socialists that the instruments of production should be the property of the state."

Best Way to Wash the Hair

(From Beauty Notes.)

"Every woman either does or should dread to shampoo with soap. It is really bad for the hair, as the alkali destroys the luster and causes brittle, coarse, splitting, streaky hair. Washing the hair with soap only half cleanses it and produces but a temporary fluffiness.

"If one will wash their hair with a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water they will no longer have any use for other shampoos. The scalp will be immaculately clean and the hair will dry quickly, taking on a brilliance and fluffiness that will last. Canthrox removes all dandruff, dirt and excess oil, and stops the itching at once. Nothing better can be used to make the hair beautiful and healthy."

HERE'S A REAL LIVE "COP."

He's Overcome by Gas While Watching to Make Arrest.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 21.—Samuel McFarland, a special policeman in the Eighteenth district, was overcome by gas in the afternoon while waiting to serve a warrant at the home of Mrs. Mary Fredericks, 2650 North Second street. One of Mrs. Frederick's lodgers was wanted on a trivial charge and as he was not in when McFarland called the policeman decided to wait and took a seat in the parlor.

Half an hour later Mrs. Fredericks discovered the cop unconscious and the room filled with gas. An investigation showed that a plugged jet was leaking. McFarland was taken to the Episcopal hospital, where it required an hour's work to revive him.

THE CHILD THAT IS DIFFERENT.

Writing in the April Century of "The Child that is Different" from the normal youngster, Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr says that the proper development of such children is society's most perplexing problem today. She estimates that "one third of all children under fourteen years of age cannot keep up with the ordinary school curriculum, which is devised to meet the needs of perfectly healthy, normal, average, well-fed, well-cared-for youngsters." The paper will abound in valuable suggestions as to what can be done for the "different" child, and as to the matters in which the parents' care should be surrendered to the specialist.

JUNCTION AGENTS HAVE CONFERENCE

Pennsy Freight Business Hustlers Gathered at the Anthony.

SPECIAL RATES TO THE FAR WEST

Railways Announce Number of Cheap Excursions —Shop News.

A most interesting meeting, particularly to the participants, is in session this afternoon in the banquet hall at the Anthony hotel. It is a gathering of the Pennsylvania freight agents at the junction points of the Western division and it will be memorable because it is likely to be the last gathering of the kind in this city which William Borner, assistant traffic manager of the Pennsylvania, will attend in his present capacity, for he is seventy years old and will go on the retired list April 1.

The meeting was called by Division Freight Agent E. T. Wood, who is presiding, for the purpose of an exchange of ideas between the agents with a view of getting at the best methods of conducting business and bringing the Pennsylvania more closely in touch with its patrons. At the meeting are the following: William Borner, of Chicago; Division Freight Agent E. T. Wood; Supt. W. M. Wardrop, Union Line Agent H. M. Quicksell, Local Agent E. H. Kirkland, Special Agent Robert Learmonth, Trainmaster J. F. Patterson, Cashier C. M. Jones, Chief Freight Office Clerk William J. Haas, W. J. Quillman and Harry Barringer, chief clerk and rate clerk respective of the division freight office, all of Fort Wayne; Agent F. M. Eakin, of Bucyrus; Agent J. B. League, of Upper Sandusky; Agent F. C. Mohr, of Forest; Agent R. E. Hunt, of Ada; Agent W. S. Stroupe, of Dunkirk; Agent W. W. Crooks, of Lima; Agent C. M. Woods, of Delphos; Agent B. A. Welsh, of Van Wert; Agent I. A. Cullen, of Columbia City; Agent J. H. Lones, of Warsaw; Agent J. E. Hanes, of Plymouth; Agent J. A. Bell, of Hamlet; Agent J. R. Crooks, of Hanna; Agent E. D. Hodges, of Valparaiso; Agent C. M. Mackay, of Gary, and Agent E. G. Sayger, of Hobart.

Mr. Borner will leave this evening for Pittsburg, accompanied by Mr. Wood, where they will attend a meeting of the higher freight officials and the division freight agents.

ENGINEER WAS A HERO.

Warsaw Paper Lauds Action of Bayless Lower.

The story of the accident at Winona Tuesday night as published by the Warsaw Daily Times, makes Engineer Bayless Lower quite a hero. It reads as follows: "With his hands so badly scalded that the flesh was literally cooked, Bayless Lower, a Pennsylvania railroad engineer, climbed over the tender of his engine and stopped his runaway train by cutting the air hose connecting the engine with the first car. The accident occurred just west of the Winona station on Tuesday evening. Engineer Lower's act was one of the most heroic ever recorded in the railroad history in this section. The accident was due to the breaking of a steam pipe leading direct from the boiler to the cab. The cab was instantly filled with steam and Engineer Lower was driven from his post before he had time to stop his train, which was a west bound freight. The fireman rushed from the cab at the first sound of rushing steam and escaped uninjured. He reached a place of safety by passing through the front door of the engine cab to the running board at the side of the engine.

"As soon as the train was stopped, Engineer Lower and his fireman, whose name was not learned here, hurried to the Winona Interurban company's new power house. Dr. A. C. McDonald, the Pennsylvania physician, was immediately summoned by telephone and later the two men were brought to Warsaw. It was found that Engineer Lower was badly scalded about the hands and arms and on the back of his neck. His condition is not serious, however, and he was taken to his home in Fort Wayne later in the evening.

"What might have been the result had Engineer Lower failed to stop his train is of course merely a matter of conjecture. The train would probably have passed through Warsaw without a man in the cab and might have continued on its trip west until some other train blocked the track, when a bad wreck would probably have occurred."

EFFICIENCY TESTS.

Pennsy Reports for 1911 Shows Good Results.

Over 500,000 efficiency tests were made in 1911 by the Pennsylvania railroad, and the reports—made public today—show that the employes have a record of 99.7 per cent. perfect.

Efficiency tests—at one time called surprise tests—as conducted on the Pennsylvania railroad, over a wide range of subjects, such as "conformity to speed regulations," "observance of all kinds of signals," "leaving or arriving ahead of time," "car doors not properly closed" and many others of a similar nature.

Tests are conducted by division officials of the railroad, who at unusual times and places, check up employes in their work, to see that all rules and regulations are obeyed. Failure to observe any of the rules regarding the use of signals is immediately reported and the offender is called before the proper official for discipline.

In 1911 the Pennsylvania railroad made exactly 543,572 efficiency tests and 99.7 per cent. recorded perfect. In other words only three-tenths of 1 per cent. of these tests failed to find employes obeying the spirit and letter of the company's rules. In a very large majority of this three-tenths of 1 per cent. the observance of rules was partial, but any slight infraction was counted against the employe's record.

MILK STERILIZER MACHINERY.

Fort Wayne Concern Presents Interesting Exhibit.

The small model sterilizer which the Engineering company had on exhibition in New York can now be seen in the show window of the Indiana Furniture Co. This machine has attracted considerable attention while on exhibition in the east. It is only a reduced model, the regular size machines are about 20 feet long and 8 feet high, and weighing as much as 17 ton each. These sterilizing machines are built to produce 60,000 gallons of milk per day and generally there are two of these machines in use in each factory. The Engineering company has within the last four years sold sixty of these machines, and they are in use and known in every milk producing state in this country, Canada, and even as far as Australia. There are also on exhibition with this sterilizing machine a most complete selection of samples of the different brands of condensed milk that is produced with the machines manufactured by the Engineering company, in fact, about 75 per cent. of all the condensed milk that is used in the United States is produced in the machines that are made here in Fort Wayne by the Engineering company. Mr. Gustav Bengs, who is with the Engineering company, is the inventor of this sterilizing machine.

SOME RATES TO WEST.

Tourists Will Have Choice of Many Dates.

Local ticket agents have been advised of a number of events on the Pacific coast to which a round trip rate of $71 from this city will be made. At present there is in force a one way tourist rate of $36.50, for which tickets will be on sale until April 15. Next comes the Mystic Shrine rate of $71, with tickets on sale April 27 to May 3; for the Rose Festival at Portland, Ore., tickets on sale May 27 to June 6; general assembly Presbyterian church at Seattle, Wash., tickets on sale May 15, 16 and 17; convention of the National Electric Light convention at Seattle, tickets on sale May 27 and 28 and June 3, 4, 5 and 6; convention of the Knights and Ladies of Honor at Los Angeles, tickets on sale May 15, 16 and 17; Federation of Women's clubs at San Francisco, tickets on sale in June, date not given; Presbyterian Women's Foreign Missionary society, Van Couver, tickets on sale June 27 to July 5; Elks' convention at Portland, tickets on sale June 27 to July 5; national encampment G. #### PORTABLE TELEPHONES.

Pennsylvania Equipping Working Forces With Them.

A new style portable telephone for use on railroads consists of a receiver and transmitter in one piece and a jointed connection pole about twenty-two feet long. The end of the pole is divided down about eighteen inches and on the ends of the two sections are the hooks for connecting the telephone with the wires. This is accomplished by sticking the end of the pole between the wires, turning it one-quarter around and then pulling the string which causes the two prongs to drop outward. A slight latteral twist of the pole and a drop of a few inches causes the connection hooks to catch onto the telephone wires and the 'phone is ready for business. The Pennsylvania has just received a dozen of these portable 'phones for use on work trains and the wreck train and for the foremen of the track repairmen on the Western division. The company is going to put in a number of new rails the coming summer and the 'phones will be of incalculable value to the men engaged in the work. By means of it they can learn just when they can expect a train and can time the removal of a rail for replacement accordingly.

GAVE COMRADE A PLOW.

Pennsy Employes Pay Respect to Joseph Nomina.

Yesterday Joseph Nomina, a carpenter at the Pennsylvania round house, retired from that position and April 1 he will move his family on a farm out near Robison park, which will be their home in the future. Last night about twenty of the men employed at the round house went in a body to the Nomina home to present a plow they had bought for their old comrade. After the presentation ceremonies were over the men accepted Mr. Nomina's invitation to remain awhile and they spent an hour or two most pleasantly in playing cards, listening to music and recalling old times, followed by a delicious luncheon by the host and hostess.

HANDLE MANY CARS.

Figures furnished in connection with the switch yards at Clearing, Ill., near Chicago, show that more than 4,500,000 cars, exclusive of traffic moving to and from the Union Stock Yards, are handled annually in that city, and of this number 1,500,000 are interchanged. It is declared that many thousands of cars are needlessly hauled down town, and there is a great waste of efficiency. The Clearing yards are in the shape of two great kites placed end and end, with an elevation at the point of connection by which cars can be sent by gravity to the classification track devoted to each particular road.

RAILROAD WINS CASE.

In the case at Winchester of J. A. Long vs the Pennsylvania company, the jury decided in favor of the defendant. Long claimed to have been damaged to the extent of $700 when the defendant's employes put some horses in a building in which the plaintiff had a lot of chicken feed stored and injured the latter to the extent of the sum demanded. The building was located at Ridgeville and the incident which resulted in the suit occurred three years ago, when the railroad company was double tracking the line at that point.

SUCCEEDS JOHN BLACK.

Ernest E. Loganbrice has succeeded the late John A. Black as porter at the offices of the Nickel Plate, in the depot building. He came here from Columbus, where he was similarly employed. Black had filled the position for a number of years and by his courteous manners and faithful performance of the duties won and retained the confidence and esteem of the men employed in the building.

OLD MAN HURT.

With a severely wrenched back in addition to other injuries, Lewis Williams, 70, is confined to bed at his home at McComb, having been struck by a Nickel Plate train. The aged man had been gathering coal along the Nickel Plate right-of-way, and with a wheelbarrow load, started home. He failed to notice the approach of a Nickel Plate train until it was almost upon him. Then his desire to protect his wheelbarrow from damage came near costing his life.

TO ATTEND COMRADE'S FUNERAL.

A number of the employes of the Fort Wayne Electric works will accompany the remains of their late associate, James Mock, to Butler, Ind., and attend the funeral services next Saturday. The deceased, who had been employed at the works for some time, was popular with his shopmates. He was a member of the Relief union and this morning the bereaved family received $100 from the association in payment of the claim his membership gave them.

AT CONVENTIONS.

C. A. Dunkelberg is in Chicago attending a meeting of the Railroad Maintenance of Way association, and C. H. Davies and J. W. Runyan are attending the meeting of the sealers of weights and measures at Indianapolis, all in the interest of S. F. Bowser & Co.

DERAILMENT AT LAOTTO.

A train and two engines were tied up an hour or two on the G. R. & I. road at LaOtto this morning, by the derailment of some cars. The Fort Wayne wreck crew was called to the scene and soon replaced the cars and repaired the tracks. No one was hurt.

IS TWENTY-SIX TODAY.

Chief Clerk George J. Miller, of the Wabash freight office, was twenty-six years old today and he observed the anniversary by working as usual. Mr. Miller has filled his present office over four years, coming here from Napoleon, where he was employed by the company.

NEWS WAS EXAGGERATED.

Later reports from the home of Maurice Prindiville, the veteran Pennsylvania passenger conductor, are to the effect that the hemorrhage that attacked him several days ago was not as serious as reported. He is said to be doing well and will be on duty again as usual next week.

SPECIAL THEATER TRAIN.

The Nickel Plate handled the Minneapolis Symphony people from this city to Chicago on a special train consisting of four cars and a baggage car. The company gave a concert under the auspices of the Morning Musicale last night.

DR. WAGNER ON DUTY.

Dr. E. F. Wagner, medical examiner for the Pennsylvania Relief association, is giving personal attention to the business of his office again, after a serious illness which kept him from his office several weeks. He is still quite weak, but is rapidly gaining strength.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Pennsylvania Engineer George Burchard and Fireman Bert Young are sick and off duty.

A. L. Hadley, chief engineer at the Fort Wayne Electric works, is in Madison, Wis., on business for the company today.

Robert Graffe, who resigned a position at the Pennsylvania shops last week, has taken employment at the Fort Wayne Electric works.

W. C. Mahrt, chief clerk for Division Storekeeper H. W. Hurst, of the Wabash, is suffering from a severe cold and is not at the office today.

F. N. Hausbach, of the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, had the knuckle of one of his fingers badly injured by a hot scale of iron penetrating it.

Two more borrowed engines were delivered to the Grand Rapids and Indiana road by the Pennsylvania today, making seven loaned to the G. R. & I. this week.

J. C. Nyeum, who was employed as a carrier by the Phelps News agency for some time, has taken employment as engine crew caller with the Pennsylvania.

Walter Rheinhart, formerly employed in his father's blacksmith shop, on South Broadway, has taken employment as messenger for Foreman Henry Rehling, at the Fort Wayne Electric works.

C. Renken, D. A. Wolford, Chris Rhein, R. W. Shaw and James Young, Pennsylvania shopmen, are sick and off duty. J. F. Bachelder, of the blacksmith shop, is off duty on account of sickness in his family.

Engineer John B. Ryan, of the Pennsylvania, has obtained a three months' leave of absence and will spend the time in Kansas with relatives. He has been in poor health for several months and hopes to get physical benefits out of the trip.

TALKED OVER CONDITIONS.

Dr. Crull and Prof. J. N. Study Confer About the Miner School.

Dr. Eric Crull, secretary of the health board, and Prof. J. N. Study, superintendent of schools, held an informal conference at the city hall today at which the Miner school building was under fire.

The health board has had no meeting to determine just what changes are necessary but they found some conditions there that ought to be improved and this will probably be done as soon as the school board is notified.

"There will be no condemnation of the building," said Dr. Crull today, "and I have no doubt that as soon as the things that ought to be done are pointed out to the school board will do them."

OWEN EAGAN.
JUDGE OTTO ROSALSKY.
INFERNAL MACHINE EXPLODING IN THE HANDS OF ASSISTANT INSPECTOR OWEN EAGAN IN JUDGE ROSALSKY'S LIBRARY. POLICEMAN WHITE LEAVING ROOM.

The New York police are rapidly gathering evidence which will in a few days result in the arrest of one or more persons implicated in the attempt on the life of Judge Rosalsky by a bomb. It will be remembered that Judge Rosalsky is at the present time playing an important part in the sensational Schiff-Brandt case, which has attracted wide attention. Owen Eagan, who was sent from the Bureau of Combustibles to the home of the Judge to make an investigation, was examining the infernal machine when it exploded in his hands. His condition is serious.

NEUMAN CASE IS SET FOR MONDAY

Saloon Man Accused of Misdemeanor, is Given Continuance.

CITY COURT DOCKET

Otto Neuman, charged with allowing Raymond Netterfield, a minor, to loiter in his saloon on High street, asked for and was granted in the city court a continuance until Monday.

He is also charged jointly with Beberstein, his bartender, with selling liquor to the same young fellow. A number of witnesses were present when the case was called and the father of Netterfield, who is about twenty years old, is making a determined fight in the matter.

Wm. A. Bean, a negro, who was turned down some time ago because he could not pass an examination for admittance to the bar, asked for a continuance until tomorrow. He is charged with collecting and retaining $5 belonging to Thomas Turner, another negro.

Joseph Murray, a vag who got out after serving eleven days for drunkenness, was begging in Bloomingdale and insulting people who refused to give him. He got $5 and costs.

Pius Falkey, J. E. Mulford and Ralph Derbyshire, charged with loitering were given opportunity to get work.

Charles Orcutt, charged with vagrancy, and William H. Brown, plain drunk, were allowed to go.

PEFFER AGAIN WRITING BOOK.

Former Senator is Able to Work After Amputation of One Leg.

Topeka, Kan., March 21.—Ex-Senator W. A. Peffer, 80 years old, one of whose legs was amputated a week ago, has resumed work on his autobiography. He expects to finish the book in two months, having gathered all his speeches and writings on the railroads, tariff and the money question, and the speeches of others on the Farmers' Alliance and the Populist movements. The book will show the causes of the alliance movement as seen by a man who led it.

TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP.

W. G. Shea, general organizer of the Brotherhood of Painters, Paper Hangers and Decorators of America, addressed a hundred members of local No. 469 at its meeting last evening. Mr. Shea spoke at some length on the subject of "Organization." It was suggested by members of the local union that the membership be increased by fifty or sixty members, and that in such event a wage increase could be urged with more effectiveness. Another open meeting will be held Wednesday night of next week at which time Mr. Shea will again address the local.

ORGANIZES NEW COMPANY.

H. J. Ash, who recently disposed of the stove business which he conducted for fifty-two years, has organized a new company which will be known as the H. J. Ash Furnace company. The company has secured a location in the building formerly occupied by the Globe Printing company, corner of Barr and Columbia streets. Associated with the new firm is C. H. Landwehr, formerly traveling salesman for the Holland Furnace company.

FORT WAYNE IN STORM'S GRIP

ernoon, the full intensity of the storm was felt here about about 5:30 o'clock last evening, when the wind reached a velocity of thirty-five miles an hour. The sidewalks were heavily covered with sleet and walking was almost impossible.

Wabash Wires Down.

The steam roads were not seriously affected locally by the storm, but on some of them the trains from storm visited districts were late in reaching the city. The Wabash was probably the most affected, its trains from the west being from two to five hours late last night and this morning. All the Wabash wires and a number of poles for a distance of 100 miles west of Danville, Ill., were carried down by the ice which gathered on the wires. The G. R. & I. wires south of Richmond were also prostrated. There is no particular trouble on the Nickel Plate and the Pennsylvania telegraph lines in this part of the country, but the local Pennsylvania telegraph officials have been advised that all wires on the Panhandle system, between and including Indianapolis and Kokomo, are down.

LA FOLLETTE'S LEAD.

Will Be 15,000 in North Dakota and May Go Higher.

Grand Forks, N. D., March 20.—Robert M. LaFollette's majority will not be far from 15,000 when the final primary returns are received and may be heavier. Of the total votes La Follette has polled about 32,000 votes, while Roosevelt has polled about 18,000. The Taft vote in the state has only been about 3,000. It is in the western congressional district that the greatest surprise was found. The entire northern part of the district, consisting of a group of eight counties, went to La Follette solidly, giving him a plurality of about 3,000. In the southern part of the district, on the Missouri slope, this lead was increased, according to the latest reports available from that district.

Theodore Wentz, cashier of the German-American National bank, who until two days ago was a patient at St. Joseph's hospital, where he submitted to an operation for appendicitis, is again attending to his business affairs and spent Wednesday afternoon and this morning at his desk. Many congratulations have been received over his speedy recovery. Mr. Wentz was at the hospital three weeks.

GOV. MARSHALL'S ADDRESS TO THE DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—In his address to the democratic state convention, Governor Marshall said:

A party which does not have a definite faith attractive enough to draw men to its ranks, deserves defeat. It likewise deserves defeat when it insists upon making nonessentials paramount.

The democratic party of Indiana requires allegiance to all the essentials, but it believes in granting to the individual citizen the largest liberty of thought and conduct in the nonessentials. The Great Teacher of mankind has not in two thousand years impressed all humanity with the essentials of His faith, yet His humble followers become mighty men of war while wrangling over the nonessentials. How vain, therefore, is the effort of a party to demand more than loyalty to its essentials of faith. It is our belief that howsoever men have cast their ballots in the past, 80 per cent of the voters of Indiana are, this day, democrats at heart.

Safeguarding Man's Rights.

No one would fail to subscribe to the doctrine that he is entitled to life, to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness. His ambition and his selfishness might induce him to deny these rights to his brother, but in the forum of his own conscience, he would not dare dispute his brother's claim to them. And these rights, men agree, should be safeguarded from both the encroachments of majorities and the usurpations of powerful minorities.

I can not myself subscribe to the doctrine that majorities are always right. As in matters of religion "one on God's side is a majority," so in matters of politics, one on the side of the inalienable rights of man constitutes a majority. I grant the privilege of majorities to rule, but always with constitutional limitations and with never an encroachment upon the inalienable rights of a minority, however small. If majorities have been invariably right, then I, most of my life, have been wrong. If majorities have been always right, then today, the republic would be living in history and not in hope. Upon the contrary, most people believe that the stability and efficiency of the republic must rest upon the wisdom and conscience of private citizen and public servant alike, regardless of mere majorities, and they believe that the voice of the people is the voice of God when people listen to God. Consequently, they stand amazed at the attitude of those who give no other reason for a man's popularity than that he says he stands for a square deal.

Squareness as Catch Word.

The democrat believes that freedom, justice and squareness are attitudes of mind and conduct, not mere catch words for use by the political charlatan. He holds that fraternity is the fixed faith of the nation, not a dress suit to be worn by the aristocrat when seeking public favors. He does not prejudge men or measures, nor does he envy the successful, honest man. He believes in getting on in the world, but not in getting all. To him vested rights are sacred, while vested wrongs are growing more and more profane. He is a law abiding citizen, believing in the due administration of justice, and he holds that that which helps the few to the detriment of the many is not the perfection of reason, but the perfection of selfishness.

He can never be convinced that in the scales of civilization an almighty dollar should bear down an immortal soul. He holds that with the wondrous privileges of liberty, law encrowned, there rests upon him the sacred duty of so using his time, his talent, his opportunity and his money as not to injure his less fortunate brother. For him equality before the law means equality of opportunity and treatment, not necessarily equality of labor nor equality of reward. It means a free and unimpeded highway wherein to go forward. He uses as the compass of his political life the faith that none are born to the imperial purple and none to hodden gray, but that all are born to opportunity, to endeavor and to service. He believes that "that far off divine event toward which the whole world moves," is the advent of that time when men shall realize that the age of brute force has passed, that the age of intellectual acumen is disappearing, and that the century's aloe of democracy flowers only when men cease to seek the larger good and strive for the commonweal.

Watching Pure Democracy.

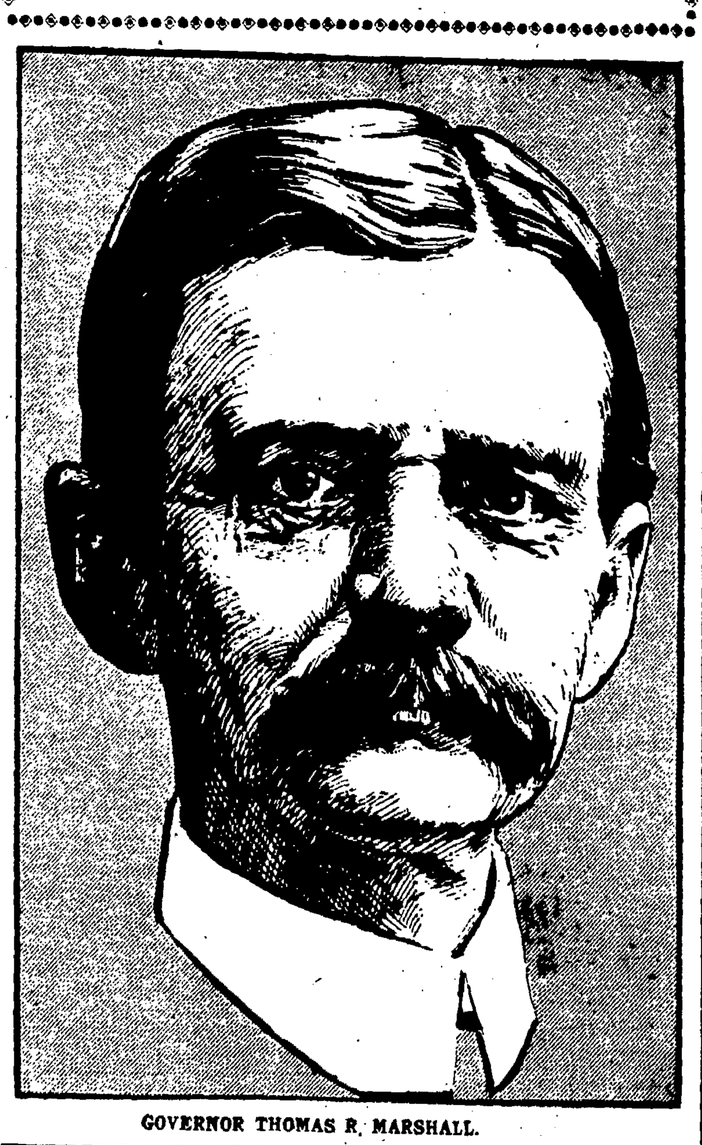
The democratic party of Indiana is watching with interest the experiments of other states in changing a republican form of government from one of a representative character to one of a pure democracy. Its interests, however, is casual. We are familiar with the historical fact that no pure democracy has ever long survived, and yet it is not ours to declare that changing civilization may not have so changed the hearts and consciences of men that the failure of Athens may not be the success of Arizona.

If I have any fault to find with representative government in Indiana, it is that it represents, not that it does not represent. It has represented but rarely my views upon political questions. It has not always represented the higher ideals of life, but when it has failed to do so, it has represented the carelessness and indifference or perhaps the ignorance and dishonesty of the constituency. I have yet to observe the public servant who was not anxious to please the folks back home when they made their wishes known to him. When representative government in Indiana shall cease to be representative, when public servants become public masters and the employes of private interests and when we become impotent under the law to rectify our wrongs, then I shall have no hesitancy in yielding my assent to a change in the form of our democracy, but not until then. There are changes for us to make but they may all be made in accordance with the ideals of the fathers. We have faced great crises and have found that whenever we wished we could eliminate evils without disturbing the checks and balances of our co-ordinate system of government.

SOUNDED THE KEYNOTE FOR INDIANA DEMOCRATS.



GOVERNOR THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

Record of Democrats.

The democratic party is in power in Indiana. If it is to continue in power its acts committed during its period of power must meet the commendation of the people. More than this, it must say what it means to do in the future and it must mean to do what it says. Four years ago we elected a governor, a lieutenant governor, a state superintendent of public instruction, and a majority of the lower branch of the general assembly. Our majority in the assembly enabled us to send as our representative in the senate of the United States that great champion of the people's rights, Benjamin F. Shively. Two years ago, we put our faith and conduct again to the touch of public approval, and as men count the spoils of office, but as I choose rather to consider them—the badges of servitude—there were inducted into practically all the offices in the state house democratic public servants.

A general assembly, democratic in both branches, was elected, and that assembly honored itself, and in so doing honored the state and the nation by placing in a position of power and influence in the United States senate Indiana's well beloved son, John Worth Kern. With our two senators, there went to the national congress at Washington, Messrs. Boehne, Cullop, Cox, Dixon, Moss, Gray, Korbly, Adair, Morrison, Rauch, Cline and Barnhart—fourteen men in all—who have, amid the temptations and in spite of the opportunities for betrayal, worn upon their bosoms the white lilies of the people's cause, and by voice and vote have striven to lift from the toiling shoulders of America's millions some of the burdens with which they have been loaded by special privilege. These men have not been bleating of their faith in the square deal. Nature so made them that they could not be crooked, and their record alone is sufficient justification for the democratic party of Indiana to boldly declare its right to remain in power.

"Noise is Not Everything."

There has been so much noise and confusion in other parts of the republic, so much blowing of trumpets and beating of drums, that it might be supposed that the democratic party in Indiana had been careless of people's rights and not solicitous for their welfare. Noise is not everything. A cowboy can shoot up a camp and create a vast amount of consternation, but it is only when grim-visaged men quietly determine to have some law and to enforce it that conditions are bettered. The finest machinery works with the least noise.

Touching the statutory enactments in America, the democratic party of Indiana awaits with confidence the judgment of the sociologist and the political economist as to whether it has kept faith with the people's cause. It crystallized into law important principles and is now enforcing them. Let me briefly mention some enactments:

Public Health Laws.

Along the line of public health we have new laws:

To curtail child labor.

To regulate the sale of cold storage products.

To require hygienic school houses and to permit the medical examination of school children.

To prevent blindness at birth.

To regulate the sale of cocaine and other drugs.

To provide treatment for hydrophobia through the state board of health.

To establish public playgrounds in the capital city of the state.

To strengthen the pure food act and to require the branding of renovated butter.

Along the line of labor let me mention the acts:

To create a bureau of inspection.

To provide a weekly wage.

To require purchase by the state of the products of the Indiana reformatory.

To establish free employment agencies.

To require the inspection of locomotive boilers.

To require standard cabooses.

To require full switching crews.

To require storm windows for locomotives.

To require handbrakes on railway cars.

To require block system on railroads.

To require the erection of danger signs at grade crossings.

To require railroad companies to give certificate of service to discharged employes.

To safeguard the lives of laborers on high buildings.

To provide examination for miners.

The Liability Laws.

And let me also mention in connection with labor legislation the employers' liability law, abolishing the doctrine of assumed risk and the fellow-servant doctrine and making contributory negligence a defense.

Along the line of public morals we enacted laws:

To prevent corrupt practices at elections.

To require general registration of voters.

To provide penalties for furnishing money to naturalize foreigners.

To enable the state board of pharmacy to revoke the license of whisky selling druggists.

To increase the penalty for horse stealing.

To provide police court matrons.

To establish uniform weights and measures.

To prevent traffic in white slaves.

We also adhered strictly to our platform declaration in the matter of liquor legislation and, in accordance therewith, changed the unit of option from counties to townships and cities and enacted, in addition thereto, the "Proctor" regulatory law.

Other enactments of pith and moment to the people might be mentioned as follows:

To provide for the examination of building and loan associations.

To prevent the granting of rebates on policies and insurance.

To fix liability on bills of lading.

To permit night schools in cities.

To permit the purchase of flags by school trustees.

The democratic legislature also ratified the income tax amendment. It created one commission to investigate industrial and agricultural education and another to investigate the feasibility of establishing a state workhouse and penal farm. It authorized the purchase of a farm, provided state finances would permit, for an insane colony where the incurably, but not viciously insane, might have the benefits of outdoor life. It appropriated $30,000 for the advancement of agriculture, domestic science and rural life. It sought to provide for the industrial education of colored children.

Fees and Salaries Investigation.

The legislature also ordered a thorough and systematic investigation relative to fees and salaries. This was to promote fair dealing and uniformity. The democratic party believe in the strictest economy in the administration of public affairs, but it also believes that the workman is worthy of his hire and that township and county officials should be paid salaries commensurate with their ability and service. It deplored the patchwork system by which the fee bill was from time to time being changed, knowing that justice was not being done thereby to many ill paid officials, and so it ordered the state board of accounts to canvass thoroughly the question of compensation and salaries and to report to the next general assembly that an equitable readjustment may be made.

In addition to all this, the legislature presented to the people of Indiana, for their adoption or rejection, a new constitution. To it I shall later invite your attention.

This mammoth amount of legislative good was produced with the solidarity of the democratic majority unimpaired and with established principles of government unmolested. The laws enacted are evolutionary of democratic principles—not revolutionary. They disclose that democracy is the Christianity of statecraft, and our party is so unanimous in this belief that it does not evince more joy over one sinner that repenteth than over the ninety and nine that went not astray.

Problem of Social Order.

It has been said that "the reformer oftimes forgets that behind the problem of a better social order lies the problem of the better man." From 1898 to 1908 the problem of the democratic party in Indiana was educational. It had long been awake and had long desired better things. Therefore, a better social order came with no friction in the year 1910. I still pin my faith to the knowledge, integrity and zeal for righteousness of the average man in Indiana, and I hold that the legislation of the last assembly was enacted because the representatives of the people knew that the people desired it. In other words, we preached, we waited and we won. You may overturn and overturn, and overturn systems of government, and you will accomplish nothing under any system until the people take time to find out the truth and use the courage to demand that the truth shall make them free.

I know that the great majority of Hoosiers have passed from the old dispensation of opportunity to the new dispensation of integrity. Better things came to us because we were willing to labor and to wait. A thoughtful consideration of all history had convinced us that the millennium would be in the past and not in the future if the zeal each new convert were immediately crystallized into works. Neither the ultra-conservative nor the ultra-radical freed the slaves. This was done by Abraham Lincoln, who listened to each. He struck at the opportune time. He reserved his fire until he could see the whites of the enemies' eyes. He knew what many of us have not yet learned—that the charge at Balaklava was magnificent, but that it was not war.

Reference to Roosevelt.

Ethics deny the dragging of a personal opponent into a public speech unless thereby a sharp distinction between views can be drawn. With republican quarrels and controversies, we have nothing to do. We must appeal to the people of Indiana on the strength of our principles and the integrity of our candidates. We dare not rely upon the weakness of our opposition and it would be cowardly to do so did we dare.

Sixty years is but a point in the circle of civilization, yet the last sixty have produced two men whose views will leave an impress upon all time. No liberty-lover will ever care to forget the name of Lincoln, and none will be able to forget the name of Roosevelt. Lincoln held it to be the inalienable right of an unsuccessful litigant to go down to the tavern and cuss the court. It is the theory of Roosevelt that it is the right of an unsuccessful litigant to go down to the tavern and overrule the court. Bitterness of spirit and indignation at what I deem to be judicial injustices sometimes seize me. Even now I am chafing under what I conceive to be the unwarranted interference of the courts with my prerogatives. But my sober judgment, looking to the permanent good of the people, impels me to insist that the courts must remain free and untrammeled; that we must first seek relief through the remedy we now have and patiently abide the lawful reversal of judicial injustice.

The Checks and Balances.

We find ourselves in our present condition because the public has been demanding of every official that he be the whole thing. The American people do not go mad. When the clouds of injustice and oppression settle around them and the night of despair comes on, they now and then run a temperature, but when the dawn of an awakened conscience breaks again, they resume their normal condition. The fathers were not unwise when they made the checks and balances of our co-ordinate and distinct branches of government. We bred upon ourselves the evils which we have when we threw up our hats in adulation of a legislature here that clipped and interfered with executive functions or of an executive there who read the riot act to his legislature.

There breaks the dawn of an awakened conscience; there comes to men in public place the consciousness that they are the servants and not the masters of the people; that the power entrusted to them is limited in its character. We will become normal again some time—this year, I hope. No mere man has yet been able to divest himself of the idea that if he could put into operation in the three departments of government his own peculiar and particular views, he would thereby be enabled to serve the commonwealth and bestride the history of the republic like a huge Colossus. To him one of Shakespeake's characters cries: "I charge thee, fling away ambition! By that sin fell the angels. How can man, then, the image of his Maker, hope to win by it?" Let it be sufficient for a public servant to represent the people in the discharge of those duties which delegated authority has entrusted to him. Let the political teacher of the future impress upon his pupils that in the alphabet of American life, "U. S." should loom larger than "I."

Condition of State Finances.

Much has been said, and falsely said, about the condition of state finances. It is true that nothing will lie worse than figures, save figures. The people do not think in millions; they think in dollars. The fact remains that no administration can spend more money than the people give it to spend, and the democratic party has a right to ask of the man who is interested in the financial problem that he go to the treasurer of his county and demand the tax levy for the fiscal years of his administration and preceding ones. The tax levy will disclose that one and one-half cents less upon each one hundred dollars has been taken from the pockets of the people by this administration. You may regard this as a small item. In the aggregate it amounts to $290,000 a year. Notwithstanding this decreased levy, the democratic party has been able to meet the increased cost of living and the increased population at state institutions, to open up a new hospital for insane at Madison and the tuberculosis hospital at Rockville, to increase the capacity of the School for Feeble-Minded Youth and of the epileptic village, and pay off the Coliseum bonds of $100,000, plus interest, and it will be able to pay $150,000 of the state debt in July of this year, and $150,000 more in January of next year.

Three years ago, when I first assumed the discharge of the duties of my office, I found not only the general fund in the state treasury, but also the debt-paying fund, was being used for the running expenses of the state government, and that it was the purpose and intention of the general assembly of 1909 to make such appropriations that it would still be necessary to use both those funds and to continue to make constant calls for advance payments from county treasurers. But the general assembly of 1911 decreed that the debt-paying fund, which was reduced to one and one-half cents in 1905, should not be used for running expenses, but should be preserved for the purpose for which it was intended. It is this fund, left intact, which will enable us to pay the $300,000 of the state debt.

Advice of Hanly.

Let me read from the first message of Governor Hanly to the general assembly. This first quotation, I am sure, is true:

"A generously partial and confiding people by a verdict more nearly approaching unanimity than any ever before rendered by them, have confided to our care for a time the interests of the state in so far as government agencies can affect such interests."

Again:

"The present sinking fund tax rate of three cents on the one hundred dollars produces an annual sinking fund income closely approximating $450,000. This tax should be reduced to a rate sufficient only in amount to meet the bonded foreign debt, when the same becomes payable in 1910. More than that is not needed and will only accumulate as idle money in the state treasury unless we go into the market and purchase bonds before our option to pay matures, a thing we ought not to do to the extent which the present rate will make necessary if it be continued. Indeed, the present necessities of the state which can be met only out of the general fund are such as to justify us in reducing the sinking fund tax rate to one cent on the one hundred dollars."

In spite of that statement this tax rate was kept at three cents and was used for the running expenses of the state. He then complained that the appropriations already made for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1905, were: "Four hundred and sixty-three thousand dollars in excess of the estimated revenue accruing to the state within such fiscal year," and added: "This condition of the finances will become an actual embarrassment to the treasury before the end of the current year. It can be met only by borrowing money outright or by anticipating revenues for the next fiscal year."

In view of these statements will somebody kindly explain wherein I erred or incorrectly advised when I warned the general assembly of 1909 that the state was bankrupt and that it was proposing to still further increase its liability beyond its income to pay?

Use of County Jails.

We have now reached that period in the development of our penal and charitable institutions when the county jails should be used only as places of detention pending trial. They are places of idleness and viciousness and possess none of the features of a reformatory. They are the winter resorts of the "Weary Willies." The state should have a penal colony for all persons convicted of minor offenses and imprisoned for a year or less, and the prisoners there should be used in the making of public improvements.

My own view is that the institution should be situated in the shale district of Indiana, where the prisoners could be employed, part of the time, in the making of brick and part of the time in the improvement of highways. The average inmate of the prison and reformatory can not with safety be used in this work. But minor offenders need not be so carefully guarded. Their offenses against the law are largely negligible and an escape now and then would not be of great moment.

If the state finances in the next year shall not permit the purchase of a farm for the harmless and incurably insane, the next general assembly should provide for the purchase. Such a farm would relieve us of the necessity of erecting additional hospitals.

The home is the place for the child, not the orphan asylum. Many inmates of county asylums would be taken and kept by relatives in homes if it were known that they were liable to be removed first to a state orphans' home and then placed permanently in private homes. We should have a state orphans' home, and it should not be a boarding school, but a way station between love lost and love found.

The R. W. Long Hospital.

No one can estimate the great good which will come to the people of the state of Indiana and to the school of medicine of Indiana university through the munificent donation of a hospital by Dr. and Mrs. Robert W. Long. It was the pleasure of the last general assembly to accept this gift with unanimity and to agree to maintain it in the interests of suffering humanity. I volunteer to say for the democratic party that should any other public-spirited citizen of Indiana be constrained to tender like benefactions to the unfortunate of the state, our party will pledge ample provision for permanent maintenance.

GOV. MARSHALL'S ADDRESS O THE STATE CONVENTION

Complaint has been made of the manner in which the pardon board and the governor have exercised the clemency power. The board may make apology if it chooses. I have none to make. So long as the object of punishing is to be reformation and not vindictive justice, and so long as a merciful use of the clemency power results in making more than 75 per cent. of the men to whom it is extended good citizens, the Pharisee, so far as I am concerned, may continue to polish the outside of his platter with the rag of criticism.

Political Management.

The management of our political affairs and the best way in which they should be conducted are not matters about which a man may truthfully speak ex cathedra. It may be that my own political experience disqualifies me to speak at all. I have listened to the explanations of the difference between a ring and a combine. I have seen the same methods employed by each and I have found that orthodoxy to my doxy, and heterodoxy is your doxy. For a time I believed that the primary offered the means to break the force of designing and self-serving politicians, but if the primary had been in vogue for the nomination of state officers when I was a candidate, I should not have been nominated. And so, therefore, to say that a primary is the solution of our ills would be to say that I ought not to have been nominated. That, I will not say. I am going to leave that statement to my enemies.

The weaknesses of a primary are many. Nobody is responsible for the outcome. The easily massed and influenced vote always turns out. The high grade citizen refuses to be wooled around in the bear pit. There is no way to prevent fraud in the casting of ballots. Men will do en masse what they will not do as individuals. On the other hand, delegate conventions do place a burden of responsibility upon the representatives of the people, even though the people themselves are asleep. If you do anything here this day that does not meet with the approval of your brethren at home, you can be certain that they will rebuke your conduct at the polls, and that they will take good care to see to it that you do not represent them again. I stated to the last general assembly that my best judgment is a combination of the primary and the delegate convention, and I repeat it now. I would like to see a state-wide primary for the election of delegates. I would then place upon the delegates thus elected the responsibility of representative government and grant to them a discretion which, if not used for the best interests of the people, would bring the delegates into disrepute with the men who elected them, and result in the defeat of the ticket they nominated.

Principles of Jefferson.

You are here, the representatives of a militant democracy. You can look back with pride upon this occasion as a time when you were the representatives of a triumphant democracy, if you will fearlessly represent the honor, integrity and wishes of the men who sent you here. They will be content with representative government, so long as its principles are a part of the fiber of our being, not a mere garment to be taken off when the sun of public opinion had made it warm for unfaithful public servants. We are Jeffersonian democrats, not that we care any more for Jefferson, the mere man, than we do for the most unassuming citizen in Indiana, but because we believe in the great cardinal principles which Jefferson taught. We think this is a government of conscience, not commerce; of principles, not interests; of fighting cocks, not weather cocks. The past has been to us not a general muster, but the organization of a body of men whose purpose it is to keep on enacting legislation correlating to the principles of Jefferson as rapidly as our unfolding civilization warrants.

The past is only a prophesy of the future. It will be valueless to us in this campaign unless by our nominations and by our declarations of principles, we shall convince the people that we propose to go forward in the line of public service. I would not have the democracy adopt the trappings of royalty, but if it hopes to remain in power in Indiana and to come into power in the nation at large, it must honestly accept as its battle cry the motto of the house of Guelph: "I serve." To the creed of Jefferson—that men are entitled to equal opportunity in life and before the law—there must be added a solemn vow that you will see to it that the other fellow gets it as well as you.

Churchand State.

Church and state are, and I trust ever will remain, separate. But the hour is here when we must inject practical religion into our statecraft, if we hope to escape the Scylla of paternalism or the Charybris of socialism. No longer may a man with safety to either his soul or his reputation pray on the Sabbath day as the gospel commands and prey the rest of the week as the law permits. The hope of democracy is not so much in legislation, valuable as that is, as in the real life of the average citizen. Men are always building their Babels, yet few have found heaven save upon a cross of self-sacrifice. Real progress is not forward: it is backward. Out of the broad highway of commerce! Back into the straight and narrow path of conscience! Theoretically, I repeat, eighty per cent. of our people are democrats. They believe in service. Practically, we let the other fellow serve. Is the democratic party to endure? If so, it must not go forth to conquest, but to service. What, therefore, have we to offer in the way of public service?

This is a government of laws and not of men, but good laws will never be enacted and enforced save as they come as the expression of good men. The ballot is not an inalienable right. It does not necessarily rest upon age or color or sex or property or condition in life. It should be given to those only who will use it for the greatest good of all the people. An ignorant, corrupt, besotted and purchasable electorate will destroy the fabric of any democracy, whether pure or representative in its character. That the democratic party is not the champion of either ignorance or dishonesty was proved when the last general assembly presented to the people of this state for adoption or rejection a new constitution. It thereby sought to eliminate from the ballot box all who were ignorant of our institutions, all who could be purchased, and all who could be driven like dumb animals.

Practically Unamendable.

It is known by all men that the lawyers' amendment to our constitution has stood in the way of many reforms and that it now stands in the way; that the present constitution is practically an unamendable document. To cut this Gordian knot, to present a document which would meet with the approval of conscientious citizens and a document which at the same time would enable those who have particular views which they think ought to be incorporated into the organic law of the land, to obtain a hearing from their fellow-citizens, our party formulated and presented to the people this new constitution. Until the lawyers' amendment is out of the way no other amendments may be proposed. When proposed, they must not only meet the approval of two sessions of the general assembly, but they must obtain a majority of all the votes cast at the general election before they can become a part of the constitution. In the evolution of the civilization of America this was deemed too slow a process.

The question as to whether the people of this state have a right to vote upon this constitution is now before the courts. Personally, I believe that the courts have usurped functions which never belonged to them in considering this question even for a moment. I shall always believe that if they prevent a vote upon this subject they will have wrested from the people an inalienable right. And yet so thoroughly am I convinced that it is better to bear the evils we have than to fly to others we know not of, that it is better to rest quietly under judicial oppression and seek remedies by statutory enactment, than to submit your questions to an unsworn, an ignorant or a prejudiced jury with no safeguards and no method of punishment, that so far as I am concerned I shall quietly abide the decision of the court if it be adverse to my views, reserving always my right as a free born citizen to freely criticise the decision of the court and to propose all lawful measures to rectify the wrong.

Respects Power of Courts.

I have myself the utmost respect for the dignity and power of the courts, but I know that there is a vast difference between Justice Harlan and Justice Dogberry. The judicial ermine is sacred in my sight, but the judicial vermin is not. If I can have my say in democratic councils in this state, the party will promise the people that in the event that the supreme court of Indiana does not permit us to vote upon the new constitution, we will call a special election if the people will give us a general assembly, and get rid of the lawyers' amendment and will devise lawful means to present these changes to the people for their adoption or rejection.

It is not needful to refer to all the changes proposed in the new constitution. It is sufficient to say that the consensus of opinion is that these changes are all right. The controversy hinges on the power of the people to obtain them. I have, therefore, insisted that whether a representative or a pure democracy, the rights of the people can only be preserved by an honest, conscientious and intelligent electorate. When that is muddled by ignorance, dishonesty and intimidation, our liberties are lost. It being the constitutional right of an alien, who has been in America only one year, to have the right to vote in Indiana upon declaring his intention to become a citizen, is it at all wonderful that we should insist upon a change of qualifications? We are not opposed to the foreign-born citizen, but we insist that he should be a citizen of the United States before he votes in Indiana; that he should pay his poll tax, and that he should be registered.

Doubt having arisen as to our power to pass a compulsory workmen's compensation law, who disputes that the exigencies of modern life in the interests of fair dealing between man and man demand a change which will permit the passage of such an act?

Initiative and Recall.

Until the provisions of our present constitution with reference to officials are tried and until graver evils arise than have thus far arisen, there is but slight demand for the initiative, referendum and recall. I am myself not in favor of these changes now, as I see no emergency for them, but I believe that wisdom demands readiness to meet any emergency. The clause touching the initiative, referendum and recall in the proposed constitution is in the nature of a warning to officials that they must truly represent the will of their constituents or be in danger of removal from office: that they must pass laws which are in the interests of all the people, or give the people a chance to pass them themselves; that they must not pass laws granting special privileges or working injustices or the people will repudiate them. Honest representative government is the best that the world has ever known. The representative has far more time than the individual citizen to soberly consider that which is best for the people. He should possess more knowledge and skill in statecraft than the average man, or he should not be elected. He should indeed be honest and representative; if he is, ours is an ideal government. If, however, he refuses to remember his duty as a servant, there should be in the organic law of this land something which will first warn him, and then, strip him of his power. If the warning does not avail. I believe ours is an ideal government. I think honest and intelligent men will keep it measurably pure. We must adjust our electoral clause so as to admit to the ballot the honest and intelligent only. If this then shall fail us, it will be soon enough to change our form of government, and we will have the organic right to do it as given us in this new constitution.

For Public Service Commission.

Indiana is no longer an agricultural state. Of its 2,700,000 people, 2,000,000 are now living in cities, towns and villages. The municipal problem is one which immediately faces us. Thoughtful men have come to realize that there are a great many public utilities which all men in common and alike must have, such as water, light, heat, telephone service. They have discovered that a well regulated monopoly, which guarantees to the public good service at a fair price and to the owner a reasonable income upon his investment, which makes the franchise depend not upon length of years, but upon decent treatment, which gives to the public an opportunity to know that it is being fairly treated, and to obtain such treatment through public instrumentalities where it has a right to go, and not through a call at a private office where it may not be admitted, is by far the best thing which can happen to the people of a municipality.

The railroad commission of Indiana has been of great service to the people of this state, since it has ceased to be a judicial and has become an executive body. Its present inquiry into steel rails, with their alarming tendency to break and split and cause disaster and loss of life, will be of inestimable benefit to the people in the preservation of their lives and limbs. Wise men realize that the public bedamned policy in public service corporations has about passed into innocuous desuetude. They realize that state control is best for them and best for the public. The democratic party should stand for the enlargement of the powers of the railroad commission and its conversion into a public service commission. Peace will come with justice; otherwise, it will never come.

Use of State's Experts.

Indiana is maintaining great educational institutions. The experts in these institutions should, of their knowledge, give something in return to the state. The expert in promoting efficiency in public service corporations will save to the owners more than a public service commission will reduce their incomes. The owner and the public will thus receive like benefits.

In accordance with our last state platform and to conform to our belief in the doctrine of local self-government, we have enacted the township and city unit law to govern option elections as to whether saloons shall or shall not be permitted. We have, likewise, passed a stringent regulatory law, known as the Proctor law, which, fearlessly enforced, must inevitably result in lessening the well-known evils of the liquor traffic. It will be well to fearlessly and strictly enforce these laws. They are, in their language, the best regulatory laws we have ever had. Whether they prove to be so in active operation will depend upon their enforcement. These should not be regarded as prohibitory legislation, for the question of prohibition has never yet been presented to the people of this state. We have had no opportunity to pass upon prohibition. So long as regulation is to be the object of the law, the present enactments, when honestly enforced, will be found satisfactory.

Principles of Platform.

There should be a political philosophy as well as a political faith. A live mouse is more powerful than a dead lion. It does little good to be right if you can not put yourself in a position to enforce the right. Wrong, safe-seated upon a throne, does not care how many torch-light processions in the name of right go by. I have yielded my accord to the honesty and justice of former democratic platforms. Facts of history and experiences of life have disclosed, however, that great principles are settled one at a time. It is only in fiction that a man can fence successfully with a dozen opponents at once.

There has been carefully nurtured an antagonism toward the democratic party. The young men of the nation have been taught for twenty years that we are the riff-raff of humanity. Yet our party would not hesitate to submit its great principles for decision to a constricted electorate of college graduates, or to one enlarged to embrace all high school graduates, or to one still further enlarged to embrace all those who can read and write. Let us get in power before we make too many demands of allegiance to sundry policies. A man may sit in democratic councils, he may even help to formulate democratic platforms, he may vote for democratic candidates, but he can not be a democrat if he believes in special privilege of any kind.

Discussion of Tariff.

Let us go this year to the people upon a platform the cardinal principle of which is opposition to special privilege. It can not be otherwise than that every special privilege in this country is either the legitimate offspring or the godchild of the protective principle. Conscience is pliable. The desire for success unless curbed is overmastering. It is not hard to understand how the specious and exploitable arguments of the past have warped the consciences of men otherwise honest.

Let us recall some of the arguments: We must have the protective tariff to pay the war debt; we must have it to supply the deficit in the revenue caused by the repeal of the professional and stamp tax; we must have it to foster our infant industries and to make us a world power; we must have it for the protection of the American workingman, the kind of protection enjoyed perhaps by the workingmen of Lawrence, Mass.; and now we must have it because we have always had it. What difference does it make if millionaires are bred thereby like rabbits in a warren? What if dollars are taken indirectly from you and me, and are given to the owners of these protected industries without any return whatever to us or to the general government?

"Trustees Under God."

Are we not the richest people on earth? Are not these captains of industry all trustees under God? Will they not see to it that if the people ask for bread, they shall be given a book; and if they ask for fish, they shall be given a university? How easy it is for one man to imagine that he can better manage the affairs of another. How unconsciously can one drop into the belief that it is legitimate to have the taxing power of the government so adjusted as to work for his private benefit. With what a virtuous and self-satisfied mein does the protected cajole himself into the belief that, with no protective tariff there would be no work. How readily does self-interest induce him to think that the yardstick of life is not the Golden Rule, but the Payne-Aldrich bill. He would resent the doctrine of the divine right of kings, but he readily yields to the divine right of schedules. For the maintenance of such divine rights, it is perfectly legitimate to support lobbies and corrupt legislators. Do you think that a man so believing has a normal conscience? Do you believe when his conscience is satisfied in doing these things and holding these views that he has a twinge in corrupting common councils, debauching the electoral franchise or coercing the man whose bread is more essential than his ballot? Do you believe that such a man will worry much in pooling with like persons this unlawful loot and using the common pool to make peace or war, plenty or famine, prosperity or adversity? How long is the legislation of this country to be Friar Tuck legislation? How long are the laws to be enacted, first, for those who make them, and, afterward, as it may happen? Every special interest in this country runs home to Mother Protective Tariff when the people seek to prevent its depredations. I care nothing about schedules. I buy about equally of wool and cotton. I would as soon one trust had it all as to divide between two. Let us raze the home of protection, execute the mother of special privileges and see how speedily the infants will die for lack of her fostering care. The democratic party believes in genuine tariff reform. It wants no more taxes of that kind levied upon the people than are necessary to pay the expenses of the government, honestly and economically administered. It holds that reform of the tariff does not mean driving away the fat hogs that the runts may get at the swill. It means kicking the tariff trough over and letting all men do what you and I do—root, hog, or die.

For Public Economy.

The democratic party, true to its traditions, must stand for economy in public expenditures. It looks upon government as a necessity and not a luxury. Economy is a necessary corrollary where office is service and not mastery. It believes in an income tax. Those who have large incomes and whose interests are the recipients of the care and protection of the government, should pay largely therefor. Those who have less should pay in like proportion. It believes in the strict enforcement of the laws against the trusts, and will uphold all officials who seek to enforce these laws. It will devise some method whereby the courts will be made to understand that it is their business to construe the written law instead of turning themselves into a legislative body.

The democratic party is not opposed to corporations, however large they may be. It does insist, however, that corporations shall confine themselves to the purpose for which they were created by the law or that they shall yield up their lives to the author of their being. The corporation is a device of the law, with three reasons for its existence: (1) Because the object sought can not be secured by an individual or a partnership. (2) Because the investor therein is unwilling to hazard his whole fortune in the one enterprise, yet is desirous of assisting others in the promotion of a laudable business. (3) Because the business is of such a character that the law of partnership would destroy it by the death of a partner and permanence and stability should therefore be given it.

How Competition Is Killed.

There is no objection to men investing as much money as they please in one corporation formed for the purpose of doing one lawful thing. There is vast objection, however, to men being officers and directors in a half-dozen different corporations organized for the doing of the same thing and by written contract or by gentlemen's agreement forestalling the market and preventing competition. I do not believe that the law of the land now permits a written contract between corporations to constitute a marriage tie between them, nor a gentlemen's agreement to countenance their living together in open and notorious adultery. This state of the law should, however, be enacted into a statute of such plain and unmistakable terms as to cause the annulment of the charters of both corporations whenever a director or officer of any one corporation becomes a director or officer in any other like corporation. No law for the punishment of trusts and forestalling of markets should ever be repealed so as to avoid offenses already committed, and additional legislation of a stringent character should be enacted punishing owner, puppet and lawyer alike.

The lawyer is not unblamable for many of the evils in the business life of today, nor can he shift the responsibility entirely upon the shoulders of the court. If he would use his power and influence he could change the methods of procedure and the rules of evidence so as to administer justice speedily and without delay. He could get rid of technicalities. He could prevent unjust contracts and illegal combinations. He is losing ground as the big man in his community. He is losing much of his pristine power and influence because he is consenting to be a blind but intelligent instrument in the working of grevious wrongs. He can yet recover his lost glory if he will; but to do so, he must cease being a cog in a machine. He must have clients instead of permitting his clients to have him. He must do this, or, some time, he will hear a sad-eyed and sinless man say unto him: "Woe unto you, lawyers, for ye lade men's shoulders with burdens grevious to be borne."

Rights of States.

No man can keep his apple and eat it. He can not be in prison and at large at the same time. No more can a republic have large delegated powers and large reserved rights of the individual citizen. The strength of our government can not rest on governors and legislators and judges. It must abide in the reserved rights and the conscience of the individual. The more you give away the less remains. The federal government is one of delegated powers. It has already strained by judicial interpretation the general welfare clause to the limit. It wants more power. I know how it wants it. Unambitious as I believe myself to be, there have been a thousand times in three years in which I, too, have wanted power. Looking backward, I realize it was a wise thing that I did not have it.

The best government that you have is that of your townships. You know more about it; about your county government; you know less; about your state government, still less; and about your federal government, but very little. Keep the inalienable rights which the God of nature and of human destiny guaranteed to you. Do not lose your belief that this is a federation of states and not a nation. Preserve with scrupulous purity the management of your own internal affairs. Bear patiently the evils which arise from the lack of power rather than take the chance of enjoying the rights, privileges and prerogatives of a government which is so far from you that it does not know that you exist.

A tariff for revenue, opposition to every special privilege and a determination to strike it down, economy in public expenditures, enforcement and strengthening of the law and the preservation of the reserved rights of the people and of the states constitute issues which appeal to a large majority of the people of Indiana. Until we get an opportunity to put these views into practical force and effect, disputes and divisions over other reforms are valueless. They are academic in their character. If we must divide upon other questions, let us wait until these have been met. These are the great principles of the democratic party. To them every man worthy to be called a democrat pledges his faith. On other matters there may be differences. Let us not forget that when we follow these principles we become an army. Leaders may come and go. Anybody with honesty and loyalty, learning and courage, can lead. From the ranks hundreds can be drawn to make the fight and lead the charge for the success of these principles. But whenever we attempt to follow a man regardless of his life's history and regardless of his devotion to these principles, we shall not be enabled to assemble an army. We will be only guerrillas.

Takes Hopeful View.

Eight and fifty years of good and evil have left their impress on my mind and conscience. I have learned that something may be said upon the other side of every question. Perfection in government has never been attained as yet. Many men are doing things in America which the democratic party thinks they ought not to do. They will not be convinced of the error of their ways by bitter denunciation nor by forcible efforts for their reform. It has been well said that you can not indict a people. Neither can you indict a system of government nor the wrongs which follow from it. Criminals should be indicted, tried and punished. The followers of an evil system of government should by advice, admonition, reproof and argument, if possible, be convinced of the error of their ways. A poor man, myself, I can not say that success is a badge of dishonor. I can say that the methods of government which have enabled many men to grow rich in this country are badges of ignorance of democratic principles. I have faith to believe that an awakened people will change this economic system of government and will restore equal rights and equal opportunity to every man beneath the flag. As I read history, study society and probe my own purposes, I am more and more convinced that the fathers of the republic builded wiser than most of us knew; that the democratic doctrine rightly understood and reasonably enforced will produce justice and peace, will leave unscathed the honest man, will whip from the temple the changers of money, will give to labor and to capital each alike their due reward and will make in America what in time I hope will be true in the world—mankind all kin.

Be impressed with the sacred burden which rests upon your shoulders this day. You are not here to serve me or to serve any other man. You are here as the representatives of a great party which will demand the strictest accounting of your discharge of duty. You are delegates in a higher sense than that of mere partisans. I bid you love the democratic party much, but I plead with you to love Indiana more. See to it that in all that is said and all that is done you will say and do those things which will preserve unsullied the honor and perpetuate, unimpaired, the peace, prosperity, dignity and glory of the imperial commonwealth of Indiana. And if you will do those things, then you need not fear results. For the God of history and the God of nations will be roundabout you as the mountains are roundabout Jerusalem.

An offer of $30,000 for an apple tree in Oregon was made recently by an eastern syndicate and refused. The tree bears a yellow apple known as the Chela, said to be different from any other Oregon variety. The nursery company which now owns the tree will develop the fruit. Its keeping properties are said to be remarkable, which is attested by the preservation of several boxes of the fruit in cold storage for two years without deterioration.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT, IN NEW YORK SPEECH, ASSAILS POSITION OF PRESIDENT TAFT

ARE FIT TO RULE, SAYS ROOSEVELT

People Capable of Self-Control and of Learning by Their Mistakes--Answer Taft and Others.

New York, March 21.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt delivered an address on the subject of "The Right of the People to Rule" in Carnegie hall in this city last evening, before an enthusiastic audience that tested the capacity of the auditorium. Colonel Roosevelt said:

The great fundamental issue now before the Republican party and before our people can be stated briefly. It is, Are the American people fit to govern themselves, to rule themselves, to control themselves? I believe they are. My opponents do not. I believe in the right of the people to rule. I believe that the majority of the plain people of the United States will, day in and day out, make fewer mistakes in governing themselves than any smaller class or body of men, no matter what their training, will make in trying to govern them. I believe; again, that the American people are, as a whole, capable of self-control and of learning by their mistakes. Our opponents pay lip-loyalty to this doctrine; but they show their real beliefs by the way in which they champion every device to make the nominal rule of the people a sham.

I have scant patience with this talk of the tyranny of the majority. Whenever there is tyranny of the majority, I shall protest against it with all my heart and soul. But we are today suffering from the tyranny of minorities. It is a small minority that is grabbing our coal deposits, our water powers, and our harbor fronts. A small minority is fattening on the sale of adulterated foods and drugs. It is a small minority that lies behind monopolies and trusts. It is a small minority that stands behind the present law of master and servant, the sweat-shops, and the whole calendar of social and industrial injustice. It is a small minority that is today using our convention system to defeat the will of a majority of the people in the choice of delegates to the Chicago convention. The only tyrannies from which men, women and children are suffering in real life are the tyrannies of minorities.

If the majority of the American people were in fact tyrannous over the minority, if democracy had no greater self-control than empire, then indeed no written words which our forefathers put into the constitution could stay that tyranny.

No sane man who has been familiar with the government of this country for the last twenty years will complain that we have had too much of the rule of the majority. The trouble has been a far different one—that, at many times and in many localities, there have held public office in the states and in the nation men who have, in fact, served not the whole people, but some special class or special interest. I am not thinking only of those special interests which by grosser methods, by bribery and crime, have stolen from the people. I am thinking as much of their respectable allies and figureheads, who have ruled and legislated and decided as if in some way the vested rights of privilege had a first mortgage on the whole United States, while the rights of all the people were merely an unsecured debt. Am I overstating the case? Have our political leaders always, or generally, recognized their duty to the people as anything more than a duty to disperse the mob, see that the ashes are taken away, and distribute patronage? Have our leaders always, or generally, worked for the benefit of human beings, to increase the prosperity of all the people, to give to each some opportunity of living decently and bringing up his children well? The questions need no answer.

Now there has sprung up a feeling deep in the hearts of the people—not of the bosses and professional politicians, not of the beneficiaries of special privilege—a pervading belief of thinking men that when the majority of the people do in fact, as well as theory, rule, then the servants of the people will come more quickly to answer and obey, not the commands of the special interests, but those of the whole people. To reach toward that end the Progressives of the Republican party in certain states have formulated certain proposals for change in the form of the state government—certain new "checks and balances" which may check and balance the special interests and their allies. That is their purpose.

First, there are the "initiative and referendum," which are so framed that if the legislatures obey the command of some special interest, and obstinately refuse the will of the majority, the majority may step in and legislate directly. No man would say that it was best to conduct all legislation by direct vote of the people—it would mean the loss of deliberation, of patient consideration—but, on the other hand, no one whose mental arteries have not long since hardened can doubt that the proposed changes are needed when the legislatures refuse to carry out the will of the people. The proposal is a method to reach an undeniable evil. Then there is the recall of public officers—the principle that an officer chosen by the people who is unfaithful may be recalled by vote of the majority before the finding of his term. I will speak of the recall of judges in a moment—leave that aside—but as to the other officers, I have heard no argument advanced against the proposition, save that it will make the public officer timid and always currying favor with the mob. That argument means that you can fool all the people all the time, and is an avowal of disbelief in democracy. If it be true—and I believe it is not—it is less important than to stop those public officers from currying favor with the interests.

Then there is the direct primary—the real one, not the New York one—and that, too, the Progressives offer as a check on the special interests. Most clearly of all does it seem to me that this change is wholly good—for every state. The system of party government is not written in our constitutions, but it is none the less a vital and essential part of our form of government. In that system the party leaders should serve and carry out the will of their own party. There is no need to show how far that theory is from the facts, or to rehearse the vulgar, thieving partnerships of the corporations and the bosses, or to show how many times the real government lies in the hands of the boss, protected from the commands and the revenge of the voters by his puppets in office and the power of patronage. We need not be told how he is thus intrenched nor how hard he is to overthrow. The facts stand out in the history of nearly every state in the Union. They are blots on our political system. The direct primary will give the voters a method ever ready to use, by which the party leader shall be made to obey their command. The direct primary, if accompanied by a stringent corrupt practices act, will help break up the corrupt partnership of corporations and politicians.

My opponents charge that two things in my program are wrong because they intrude into the sanctuary of the judiciary. The first is the recall of judges; and the second, the review by the people of judicial decisions on certain constitutional questions. I have said again and again that I do not advocate the recall of judges in all states and in all communities. But—I say it soberly—democracy has a right to approach the sanctuary of the courts when a special interest has corruptly found sanctuary there; and this is exactly what has happened in some of the states where the recall of the judges is a living issue. I would far more willingly trust the whole people to judge such a case than some special tribunal—perhaps appointed by the same power that chose the judge—if that tribunal is not itself really responsible to the people and is hampered and clogged by the technicalities of impeachment proceedings.

I have stated that the courts of the several states—not always but often—have construed the "due process" clause of the state constitutions as if it prohibited the whole people of the state from adopting methods of regulating the use of property so that human life, particularly the lives of the workingmen, shall be safer, freer, and happier. No one can successfully impeach this statement. I have insisted that the true construction of "due process" is that pronounced by Justice Holmes in delivering the unanimous opinion of the Supreme Court when he said:

"The police power extends to all the great public needs. It may be put forth in aid of what is sanctioned by usage, or held by the prevailing morality or strong and preponderant opinion to be greatly and immediately necessary to the public welfare."

I insist that the decision of the New York court of appeals in the Ives case, which set aside the will of the majority of the people as to the compensation of injured workmen in dangerous trades, was intolerable and based on a wrong political philosophy. I urge that in such cases where the courts construe the due process clause as if property rights, to the exclusion of human rights, had a first mortgage on the Constitution, the people may, after sober deliberation, vote, and finally determine whether the law which the court set aside shall be valid or not. By this method can be clearly and finally ascertained the preponderant opinion of the people which Justice Holmes makes the test of due process in the case of laws enacted in the exercise of the police power. The ordinary methods now in vogue of amending the Constitution have in actual practice proved wholly inadequate to secure justice in such cases with reasonable speed, and cause intolerable delay and injustice, and those who stand against the changes I propose are champions of wrong and injustice, and of tyranny by the wealthy and the strong over the weak and the helpless.

So that no man may misunderstand me, let me recapitulate:

(1) I am not proposing anything in connection with the Supreme Court of the United States, or with the Federal Constitution.

(2) I am not proposing anything having any connection with ordinary suits, civil or criminal, as between individuals.

(3) I am not speaking of the recall of judges.

(4) I am proposing merely that in a certain class of cases involving the police power, when a state court has set aside as unconstitutional a law passed by the legislature for the general welfare, the question of the validity of the law—which should depend, as Justice Holmes so well phrases it, upon the prevailing morality or preponderant opinion—be submitted for final determination to a vote of the people, taken after due time for consideration. And I contend that the people, in the nature of things, must be better judges of what is the preponderant opinion than the courts, and that the courts should not be allowed to reverse the political philosophy of the people. My point is well illustrated by a recent decision of the Supreme court, holding that the court would not take jurisdiction of a case involving the constitutionality of the initiative and referendum laws of Oregon. The ground of the decision was that such a question was not judicial in its nature, but should be left for determination to the other co-ordinate departments of the government. Is it not equally plain that the question whether a given social policy is for the public good is not of a judicial nature, but should be settled by the legislature, or in the final instance by the people themselves?

The President of the United States, Mr. Taft, devoted most of a recent speech to criticism of this proposition. He says that it "is utterly without merit or utility, and, instead of being . . . in the interest of all the people, and of the stability of popular government, is sowing the seeds of confusion and tyranny." (By this he of course means the tyranny of the majority, that is, the tyranny of the American people as a whole). He also says that my proposal (which, as he rightly sees, is merely a proposal to give the people a real, instead of only a nominal, chance to construe and amend a state constitution with reasonable rapidity) would make such amendment and interpretation "depend on the feverish, uncertain, and unstable determination of successive votes on different laws by temporary and changing majorities;" and that "it lays the ax at the foot of the tree of well-ordered freedom, and subjects the guarantees of life, liberty and property without remedy to the fitful impulse of a temporary majority of an electorate."

This criticism is really less a criticism of my proposal than a criticism of all popular government. It is wholly unfounded, unless it is founded on the belief that the people are fundamentally untrustworthy. If the Supreme court's definition of due process in relation to the police power is sound, then an act of the legislature to promote the collective interests of the community must be valid, if it embodies a policy held by the prevailing morality or a preponderant opinion to be necessary to the public welfare. This is the question that I propose to submit to the people. How can the prevailing morality or a preponderant opinion be better and more exactly ascertained than by a vote of the people? The people must know better than the court what their own morality and their own opinion is.

The object I have in view could probably be accomplished by an amendment of the state constitutions taking away from the courts the power to review the legislature's determination of a policy of social justice, by defining due process of law in accordance with the views expressed by Justice Holmes for the Supreme court. But my proposal seems to me more democratic and, I may add, less radical. For under the method I suggest the people may sustain the court as against the legislature, whereas, if due process were defined in the Constitution, the decision of the legislature would be final.

Mr. Taft's position is the position that has been held from the beginning of our government, although not always so openly held, by a large number of reputable and honorable men who, down at bottom, distrust popular government, and, when they must accept it, accept it with reluctance, and hedge it around with every species of restriction and check and balance, so as to make the power of the people as limited and as ineffective as possible. Mr. Taft fairly defines the issue when he says that our government is and should be a government of all the people by a representative part of the people. This is an excellent and moderate description of an oligarchy. It defines our government as a government of all of the people by a few of the people. Mr. Taft, in his able speech, has made what is probably the best possible presentation of the case for those who feel in this manner. Essentially this view differs only in its expression from the view nakedly set forth by one of his supporters, Congressman Campbell. Congressman Campbell, in a public speech in New Hampshire, in opposing the proposition to give the people real and effective control over all their servants, including the judges, stated that this was equivalent to allowing an appeal from the umpire to the bleachers. Doubtless Congressman Campbell was not himself aware of the cynical truthfulness with which he was putting the real attitude of those for whom he spoke. But it unquestionably is their real attitude. Mr. Campbell's conception of the part the American people should play in self-government is that they should sit on the bleachers and pay the price of admission, but should have nothing to say as to the contest which is waged in the arena by the professional politicians.

I am not speaking jokingly, nor do I mean to be unkind: for I repeat that many honorable and well-meaning men of high character take this view, and have taken it from the time of the formation of the nation. Essentially this view is that the Constitution is a straight-jacket to be used for the control of an unruly patient—the people. Now I hold that this view is not only false but mischievous, that our Constitutions are instruments designed to secure justice by securing the deliberate but effective expression of the popular will, that the checks and balances are valuable as far, and only so far, as they accomplish that deliberation, and that it is a warped and unworthy and improper construction of our form of government to see in it only a means of thwarting the popular will and of preventing justice. Mr. Taft says that "every class" should have a "voice" in the government. That seems to me a very serious misconception of the American political situation. The real trouble with us is that some classes have had too much voice. One of the most important of all the lessons to be taught and to be learned is that a man should vote, not as a representative of a class, but merely as a good citizen, whose prime interests are the same as those of all other good citizens. The belief in different classes, each having a voice in the government, has given rise to much of our present difficulty; for whosoever believes in these separate classes, each with a voice, inevitably, even although unconsciously, tends to work, not for the good of the whole people, but for the protection of some special class—usually that to which he himself belongs.

The same principle applied when Mr. Taft says that the judiciary ought not to be "representative" of the people in the sense that the legislature and the executive are. This is perfectly true of the judge when he is performing merely the ordinary functions of a judge in suits between man and man. It is not true of the judge engaged in interpreting, for instance, the due process clause—where the judge is ascertaining the preponderant opinion of the people (as Judge Holmes states it). When he exercises that function he has no right to let his political philosophy reverse and thwart the will of the majority. In that function the judge must represent the people or he fails in the test the Supreme Court has laid down.

Mr. Taft again and again, in quotations I have given and elsewhere through his speech, expresses his disbelief in the people when they vote at the polls. In one sentence he says that the proposition gives "powerful effect to the momentary impulse of a majority of an electorate and prepares the way for the possible exercise of the grossest tyranny." Elsewhere he speaks of the "feverish uncertainty" and "unstable determination" of laws by "temporary and changing majorities;" and again he says that the system I propose "would result in suspension or application of constitutional guarantees according to popular whim," which would destroy "all possible consistency" in constitutional interpretation. I should much like to know the exact distinction that is to be made between what Mr. Taft calls "the fitful impulse of a temporary majority" when applied to a question such as that I raise and any other question. Remember that under my proposal to review a rule of decision by popular vote, amending or construing, to that extent, the Constitution, would certainly take at least two years from the time of the election of the legislature which passed the act. Now, only four months elapse between the nomination and the election of a man as president, to fill for four years the most important office in the land. In one of Mr. Taft's speeches he speaks of "the voice of the people as coming next to the voice of God." Apparently, then, the decision of the people about the presidency, after four months' deliberation, is to be treated as "next to the voice of God;" but if after two years of sober thought they decide that women and children shall be protected in industry, or men protected from excessive hours of labor under unhygienic conditions, or wage-workers compensated when they lose life or limb in the service of others, then their decision forthwith becomes a "whim" and "feverish" and "unstable" and an exercise of "the grossest tyranny" and the "laying of the ax to the foot of the tree of freedom." It seems absurd to speak of a conclusion reached by the people after two years' deliberation, after threshing the matter out before the legislature, after threshing it out before the governor, after threshing it out before the court and by the court, and then after full debate for four or six months, as "the fitful impulse of a temporary majority." If Mr. Taft's language correctly describes such action by the people, then he himself and all other presidents have been elected by "the fitful impulse of a temporary majority;" then the constitution of each state, and the constitution of the nation, have been adopted, and all amendments thereto have ben adopted, by "the fitful impulse of a temporary majority." If he is right, it was "the fitful impulse of a temporary majority" which founded, and another fitful impulse which perpetuated, this nation. Mr. Taft's position is perfectly clear. It is that we have in this country a special class of persons wiser than the people, who are above the people, who cannot be reached by the people, but who govern them and ought to govern them; and who protect various classes of the people from the whole people, That is the old doctrine which has been acted upon for thousands of years abroad; and which here in America has been acted upon sometimes openly, sometimes secretly, for forty years by many men in public and in private life, and I am sorry to say by many judges; a doctrine which has in fact tended to create a bulwark for privilege, a bulwark unjustly protecting special interests against the rights of the people as a whole. This doctrine is to me a dreadful doctrine: for its effect is, and can only be, to make the courts the shield of privilege against popular rights. Naturally, every upholder and beneficiary of crooked privilege loudly applauds the doctrine. It is behind the shield of that doctrine that crooked classes creep into laws, that men of wealth and power control legislation. The men of wealth who praise this doctrine, this theory, would do well to remember that to its adoption by the courts is due the distrust so many of our wage-workers now feel for the courts. I deny that that theory has worked so well that we should continue it. I most earnestly urge that the evils and abuses it has produced cry aloud for remedy; and the only remedy is in fact to restore the power to govern directly to the people, and to make the public servant directly responsible to the whole people—and to no part of them, to no "class" of them.

Well-meaning, short-sighted persons have held up their hands in horror at my proposal to allow the people themselves to construe the constitution which they themselves made. Yet this is precisely what the Association of the Bar of the City of New York proposed to do in the concurrent resolution which was introduced at their request into our legislature on January 16 last, proposing to amend the state constitution by a section reading as follows: "Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the powers of the legislature to enact laws" such as the workmen's compensation act. In other words, the New York Bar association is proposing to appeal to the people to construe the constitution in such a way as will directly reverse the court. They are proposing to appeal from the highest court of the state to the people. That is just what I propose to do; the difference is only one of method, not of purpose; my method will give better results, and will give them more quickly.

Remember, I am not discussing the recall of judges—although I wish it distinctly understood that the recall is a mere piece of machinery to take the place of the unworkable impeachment which Mr. Taft in effect defends, and that if the days of Maynard ever came back again in the state of New York I should favor it. I have no wish to come to it; but our opponents, when they object to all efforts to secure real justice from the courts, are strengthening the hands of those who demand the recall.

I stand on the Columbus speech. The principles there asserted are not new, but I believe that they are necessary to the maintenance of free Democratic government. The part of my speech in which I advocated the right of the people to be the final arbiters of what is due process of law in the case of statutes enacted for the general welfare will ultimately, I am confident, be recognized as giving strength and support to the courts instead of being revolutionary and subversive. The courts today owe the country no greater or clearer duty than to keep their hands off such statutes when they have any reasonably permissible relation to the public good. In the past the courts have often failed to perform this duty, and their failure is the chief cause of whatever dissatisfaction there is with the working of our judicial system. One who seeks to prevent the irrevocable commission of such mistakes in the future may justly claim to be regarded as aiming to preserve and not to destroy the independence and power of the judiciary.

My remedy is not the result of a library study of constitutional law, but of actual and long-continued experience in the use of governmental power to redress social and industrial evils. When, as the result of years of education and debate, a majority of the people have decided upon a remedy for an evil from which they suffer, and have chosen a legislature and executive pledged to embody that remedy in law, and the law has been finally passed and approved, I regard it as monstrous that a bench of judges shall then say to the people: "You must begin all over again. First amend your constitution (which will take four years); second, secure the passage of a new law (which will take two years more); third, carry that new law over the weary course of litigation (which will take no human being knows how long); fourth, submit the whole matter over again to the very same judges who have rendered the decision to which you object. Then, if your patience holds out and you finally prevail, the will of the majority of the people may have its way." Such a system is not popular government, but a mere mockery of popular government. It is a system framed to maintain and perpetuate social injustice, and it can be defended only by those who disbelieve in the people, who do not trust them, and, I am afraid I must add, who have no real and living sympathy with them as they struggle for better things. In lieu of it I propose a practice by which the will of a majority of the people, when they have determined upon a remedy, shall, if their will persists for a minimum period of two years, go straight forward until it becomes a ruling force of life. I expressly propose to provide that sufficient time be taken to make sure that the remedy expresses the will, the sober and well-thought-out judgment, and not the whim, of the people; but, when that has been ascertained, I am not willing that the will of the people shall be frustrated. If this be not a wise remedy, let those who criticise it propose a wise remedy, and not confine themselves to railing at government by a majority of the American people as government by the mob. To propose, as an alternative remedy, slight modifications of impeachment proceedings is to propose no remedy at all—it is to bid us be content with chaff when we demand bread.

The decisions of which we complain are, as a rule, based upon the constitutional provision that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. The terms "life, liberty and property" have been used in the constitutions of the English-speaking peoples since Magna Charta. Until within the last sixty years they were treated as having specific meanings; "property" meant tangible property; "liberty" meant freedom from personal restraint, or, in other words, from imprisonment in its largest definition. About 1870 our courts began to attach to these terms new meanings. Now "property" has come to mean every right of value which a person could enjoy, and "liberty" has been made to include the right to make contracts. As a result, when the state limits the hours for which women may labor, it is told by the courts that this law deprives them of their "liberty"; and when it restricts the manufacture of tobacco in a tenement, it is told that the law deprives the landlord of his "property." Now I do not believe that any people, and especially our free American people, will long consent that the term "liberty" shall be defined for them by a bench of judges. Every people has defined that term for itself in the course of its historic development. Of course it is plain enough to see that, in a large way, the political history of man may be grouped about these three terms, "life, liberty and property." There is no act of government which cannot be brought within their definition, and if the courts are to cease to treat them as words having a limited, specific meaning, then our whole government is brought under the practically irresponsible supervision of judges. As against that kind of a government I insist that the people have the right, and can be trusted, to govern themselves. This our opponents deny; and the issue is sharply drawn between us.

I prefer to work with moderate, with rational, conservatives, provided only that they do in good faith strive forward towards the light. But when they halt and turn their backs to the light, and sit with the scorners on the seats of reaction, then I must part company with them. We the people cannot turn back. Our aim must be steady, wise progress.

Friends, our task as Americans is to strive for social and industrial justice, achieved through the genuine rule of the people. This is our end, our purpose. The methods for achieving the end are merely expedients, to be finally accepted or rejected according as actual experience shows that they work well or ill. But in our hearts we must have this lofty purpose, and we must strive for it in all earnestness and sincerity, or our work will come to nothing. In order to succeed we need leaders of inspired idealism, leaders to whom are granted great visions, who dream greatly and strive to make their dreams come true; who can kindle the people with the fire from their own burning souls. The leader for the time being, whoever he may be, is but an instrument, to be used until broken and then to be cast aside; and if he is worth his salt he will care no more when he is broken than a soldier cares when he is sent where his life is forfeit in order that the victory may be won. In the long fight for righteousness the watchword for all of us is spend and be spent. It is of little matter whether any one man fails or succeeds; but the cause shall not fail, for it is the cause of mankind. We, here in America, hold in our hands the hope of the world, the fate of the coming years; and shame and disgrace will be ours if in our eyes the light of high resolve is dimmed, if we trail in the dust the golden hopes of men. If on this new continent we merely build another country of great but unjustly divided material prosperity, we shall have done nothing; and we shall do as little if we merely set the greed of envy against the greed of arrogance, and thereby destroy the material well-being of all of us. To turn this government either into government by a plutocracy or government by a mob would be to repeat on a larger scale the lamentable failures of the world that is dead. We stand against all tyranny, by the few or by the many. We stand for the rule of the many in the interest of all of us, for the rule of the many in a spirit of courage, of common sense, of high purpose, above all in a spirit of kindly justice towards every man and every woman. We not merely admit, but insist, that there must be self-control on the part of the people, that they must keenly perceive their own duties as well as the rights of others; but we also insist that the people can do nothing unless they not merely have, but exercise to the full, their own rights. The worth of our great experiment depends upon its being in good faith an experiment—the first that has ever been tried—in true democracy on the scale of a continent, on a scale as vast as that of the mightiest empires of the old world. Surely this is a noble ideal, an ideal for which it is worth while to strive, an ideal for which we need it is worth while to sacrifice much; for our ideal is the rule of all the people in a spirit of friendliest brotherhood towards each and every one of the people.

FICTION BY THE BEST WRITERS

THE GIVERS

BY INEZ G. THOMPSON

From the Bond doorway Horry Remsen looked out upon the morning world and found it good—though for the 21st of December it wasn't at all in character. The earth still wore withered yellow and frosty silver, patched with dulled red where belated leaves clung in hedges fended by evergreens; but the air was spiced wine, stirred by the northwest wind's clean steel, and the sky was deep on deep of bewildering blue.

As Sue Bond came out and down the steps, close to her husband's arm, Horry noted, appreciatively, that her eyes were one with the celestial hue and told her so in his own whimsically deferential manner. She courtesied prettily.

"Fair hearing, kinsman; but 'tis a speech"—she sighed prodigiously—"that I fain would hear from another than yourself—alas!" Whereupon Horry scowled in chivalrous indignation.

"Pen—you ossification!—out with a speech to the lady's eyes or I'll do you damage!" Penfield Bond smiled derisively.

"Be respectful," he advised, "you scant-year-wedded upstart, or I'll call your wife out and tell her what you're up to. Her eyes are black—and you're not supposed to be noticing that blue eyes are worn any longer. See?"

"Coarse," murmured Horry, "very coarse. Just to show you how much better I manage——" He turned back and called peremptorily: "Olivia—I say, Olivia!"

"Co-oming!" the answer drifted from above, and Mrs. Horton Remsen was heard, presently, to run across the hall on her way to them. When she appeared, the importance of Horry's achievement was made manifest—it seemed an incredible thing that she should run at the behest of any man. As Olivia Mayne she had been called "the Magnificent"; as Olivia Remsen—enhanced by happiness, dignified by her new estate—she more than ever merited the title. Her dark braids were a coronal, her tailored white simplicity a Diana's modern garb; she stood but little below her husband's height—lithe, fine-shouldered, well poised, very beautiful. Penny and Sue gave her the tribute of a long look: it wasn't possible to become "used" to Olivia; and Horry's head lifted the least bit in sheer pride. Nevertheless, he spoke casually.

"Procrastination, my dear, is to be deplored. Where's the case?—ah, yes. Now, will you be good enough to tell us what you think is the color of our cousin Sue's eyes?"

Olivia's own eyes widened. The absurdities of the three found her always a bit unprepared—though sweetly willing.

"Sue's eyes?" she repeated. As she looked down on Sue's upturned face, the tenderness that lay close under the outer queenliness welled into her voice. "Sue's eyes are the color—the bluest blue"—she looked up, instinctively—"they're just the blue of this sky!" she said delightedly; and the three laughed.

"You've shown yourself a successful tyrant," said Penny Bond to Horry, "but you're both wrong. The entirely beautiful eyes of my wife are two shades darker and fifty-seven shades warmer than the overhead. I have spoken." He said it lightly, getting a cigar from his case as he spoke, but in the glance he gave his wife Horry Remsen caught a quick ardor and intensity that confused him with the sense of having blundered on a too intimate thing.

Later, as Pen's big car purred over its meal of miles to the station, he recalled that look, however, and was glad he had seen it. . . . It meant that, in the way that mattered most, things were right with Penny and Sue. Horry veered away from the thought as soon as he found it formed—it seemed a treacherous one to entertain, with Pen smoking in old-time, silent friendliness beside him. . . . Probably Pen was right as a trivet anyway, and the nasty uneasiness he had been feeling had been a maggot in his own brain. He had been fancying that things were not right. . . . Pen had—well, but most of the time Pen had been wholly himself, and Horry had found it good to be with him—more glad, every day, that he and Olivia had abandoned the long-stay-abroad idea on which they had started in the spring. A thought of Thanksgiving had brought them hurrying overseas: their home holidays, they had suddenly found, must be spent at home. True, the thought of their several establishments, hopelessly given over to decorators' hordes, did not allure; but just then had come a cable from Pen and Sue that settled the matter of a place to stay.

It seemed that Pen's affairs, in the business sense, must be flourishing. Remsen Bond—the miracle that had been vouchsafed the pair seven months back—was as healthy, handsome and altogether amiable a young despot as common sense could ask. Verily, Penfield Bond should be a happy man. Yet

---

Fumbling absently under two coats for his cigar-case, Horry pulled out with it the small case Olivia had given him that morning on the steps. It dropped, the catch struck Pen's knee, the cover snapped up, and a string of pearls slid through their interfering clutches to the floor of the car.

Horry snapped an exclamation uncomplimentary to himself as he coiled the strand back on its velvet nest.

"Fastening broken—taking it to be fixed," he explained; "and I wouldn't have lost it for—a whole lot more than it's worth. . . . It's the first thing—don't you see?—that I gave Mrs. Remsen." He smiled over his own sentiment, but a betraying color crept into his face as he looked down at the exquisite thing. Olivia's belongings grew peculiarly her own, and the circlet brought a vision of the white throat it had vied with—brought it so clearly that Horry snapped the case shut in jealous haste and put it away.

"It remands me," he went on, a bit awkwardly, "that I want to sound you on this very thing. Olivia and I want to get Sue a little something for Christmas—and you know how easy that sort of thing isn't. 'Livia said that a mate to this very string, perhaps——"

There he stopped. Pen's gray eyes flickered upon him like threatening steel, through narrowed lids, and Pen's white teeth set viciously through his cigar, the muscles whitening about his tense lips. And then—quickly as it came, the look was gone. Pen was doing no more than squint through the fragrant haze of smoke, and his lips, relaxed, were even smiling.

"Pearls?" said he. "Why, that's mighty nice of you, but, as chance has it, I'm planning to give Sue that very thing—myself."

Under Horry Remsen's attractively guileless exterior lay depths of experience. He showed, therefore, only the right expression, and his voice was not a shade off its usual even tone as he answered.

"Bother take you—might have left us that solution, seems as if. By the way, if you haven't picked your string yet, I know the people——" They talked easily together of pearls—price—so on to commonplaces. On the train cityward they chatted with other town-going members of the colony, and a cheerful arrangement had been made for luncheon before Pen was dropped from the taxi at his office. Then and not till then did Horry Remsen let his bewilderment show.

"In the name of all the forgotten gods," he said aloud, "what did I do? What is ailing him? What can be the matter with Pen?"

An hour before the appointed time he went to the club, where he was to meet Penny for luncheon; and Pen's was the first voice he heard on entering—Pen's laugh that led the rest. And it came to Harry suddenly, that he hadn't heard Pen laugh out that way at home for a long time. . . . And as the men called greeting and Pen turned with them, Horry fancied he saw a swift clouding—gone as soon as come—that drove the persistent question back upon him, lead-weighted and sickening. Did Pen dislike him? And for what? What had he done—how could it be? The unsettling thought drove him to the silence of the writing-room, to think it over. He sat far down on his spine at a table in the unoccupied room and glowered at the club letter-head on the ready-placed thick white paper. As an individual with opinions and a well-developed personality, he had won the valuable experience of several enmities in his globe-circlings; but they had interested rather than annoyed him. This, though—if it were true—was a heart-shaking thing. He had felt so contentedly confident of Pen's friendship and understanding—had proved it many a time!—and now—this!

He shoved himself up and bent over the blotter as some one entered the room. Undeterred by his preoccupied appearance, the newcomer made straight for his table. Horry looked up with the expression that marked him his mother's son—a blending of remoteness, cool surprise and Olympian question that usually sufficed to rout undesirables without waste of words. The look changed as he saw it to be Billy Trudell, who was seating himself so unpardonably near. He and Olivia had run into Trudell in Switzerland the past July, and Trudell had removed himself from their honeymoon world in a highly likable manner. Horry smiled his friendliest.

"Hasn't occurred to me to ask when you returned, Tru'. I thought you were over for a lengthy stay, as we thought ourselves to be. When did——"

"The steamer ahead of you," Trudell answered briefly. He was a big, undistinguished, well-enough-looking and fastidious person of accepted selfishness and scant speech. His gaze, when he chose to center it, gave one the sensation of having stepped, nude, into an icy draught. He treated Horry to a second's congealing stare, threw off hesitation with a wave of his hand, and went to his point.

"I hear that you and Mrs. Remsen are staying with the Bonds. I must ask you to remember that I have been Pen's friend for many years. I want to ask if you have noticed——"

With a rush of relief and emotion that surprised himself, Horry lunged forward; scattering the paper broadcast.

"Thank the Lord! But you're the first—Trudell, what is the matter with Penny?"

Trudell's pink and impassive face revealed nothing, but the temperature of his regard seemed to go up a degree. "Then you have noticed," said he. "Do you mind telling me what?"

Horry sat back, feeling young and confused; but his concern for Penny held him.

"Why—I can't say! It has been a feeling—an undercurrent of strain, of—well, for instance——" And he told the happening in the car. "I've almost got to thinking that it's personal—that I've offended Pen; though Heaven knows how or when," he ended, frowning. It went against him to talk the thing over, to seem to gossip, but Billy Trudell took it with business-like impersonality.

"It was so before you came," he assured Horry. "Pen laughs too hard—plays too much. . . . I've been away for months and I've lost any clue I might have picked up. . . . Something's wrong, though. I—er—will you try to understand my motive in asking if your cousin, Mrs. Bond, seems—er——"

"I think I can assure you," said Horry, hastily, "that she is content. Pen cares—as he used—I'm absolutely sure."

"I, too," Trudell agreed. "I meant, however, to ask whether she continued—the same." His chill eyes and the Remsen look battled for an instant; but the single purpose of the man carried conviction, and Horry answered, though coldly.

"I thought that one had but to see her to know that Sue——"

Trudell shifted impatiently. "But I haven't seen her. If I had, there'd have been no need of asking you this. I hate this going to week-ends. I like to choose my own dinner—and companion; and I abhor gambling at breakfast. And I like extra-long sheets. And I dislike babies without hair and teeth. I go about very little. I'm a pig and unrepentant. If it were not that I contracted, long ago, the habit of friendship for Pen I wouldn't mix in this condemned affair. . . . But I think we have eliminated any question of—er—two unpleasant possibilities." He got up, his suave, indifferent self again, and took himself off abruptly. And Horry believed that two unpleasant possibilities were eliminated until, at luncheon, Trudell came up, allowed himself to be induced to make a third, and, before the cheese and bar-le-duc, had allowed himself to be badgered into going out with them for the night—at last!

"But Mrs. Bond—an unexpected guest may upset something she has on——" He went through the usual protests so genuinely that Horry was moved to admiration. He kept his noncommittal smile throughout Pen's urgings—he couldn't let himself be outplayed by Trudell; but inwardly he was divided between respect for Trudell's persistence in a friend's cause and a desire to punch his head for the implied doubt of Sue. As to Sue herself—she had but to be herself, as always.

Billy Trudell saw more. He went to his room to get into a lounging-jacket preparatory to a comfortable man's hour before bed, and, returning, was stopped, at the turn of the corridor, by the coming in from the nursery wing of Penny and Sue. Pen's arm was about her, they were speaking softly; Trudell felt barred, on this visit, at least, from joining them in the intimacy of that moment.

"You won't stay up very late, will you, dear?" he heard her ask.

"No—one cigar." Pen promised. Before Billy Trudell could retreat she turned in her husband's hold, put up her bare white arms, and drew his head down.

"Dear"—her voice was a wistful caress—"sometimes—if it were not that this is better for the babe—I could wish that we were back to the crampy little apartment we began in, and I cooking—no servants about—and not so many coming. I had you more there." Her bright head dropped to Pen's shoulder and he gathered her close, but said not a word. Trudell, lost to decency, waited and wondered at him.

"Amn't I a silly?" Sue's half-laugh begged to be contradicted. "People can't always and forever live just to themselves, I know. But I don't seem to help, as I used, and we never have time to talk—how things are going; and you look so tired, dear. Do I ask too much of you?"

"You——" Pen began, and though he said no more, the word was eloquent. Sue spoke very softly after a minute.

"Just this once tell me that I—make you happy. Do I?"

"Yes." Just one word again, quick and tense. Then, after a pause: "I'll be better after a little, dear. Business—always muddled at the year's end, y' know. . . . I'm a bit fagged, maybe——"

"I know, I know——" She stopped his half-apology quickly. "Only—tell me you're tired, sometimes. Let me pet you and coddle you and fuss over you the way—we—used——" The words trembled off to a quaver that she turned into a laugh, and she lifted her head with determined cheeriness. "'Cause you're the first, after all—spite of a dozen babies——"

"Sweetheart—you poor little girl!" Pen's arms caught her at that, drew her back to the window-seat and held her there against his shoulder in the old way. "Sue—do I neglect you? Am I changed to you? Heaven knows—Sue, am I making you unhappy?"

"Why, my precious boy—I unhappy!" Womanlike, she disclaimed it while her very inflection joyed in the assurance his tenderness gave her. "You poor, bothered, tired old honey——" With a mothering croon she drew away to take him close. Billy Trudell saw Pen's masterful head go down on the white shoulder wearily and lie close to the sweet throat while she whispered; and Billy Trudell felt a mighty shame and a tweaking loneliness, and averted his face and crept, stealthily, back to his room.

He emerged, after due time, with an elaborate stumble, and descended to take the lead in an hour of good-fellowship—cordial, kindly, vastly experienced, talkative—altogether another Trudell than Horry had guessed existed. He went to rest vastly cheered. Trudell seemed entirely at ease—Pen had been himself. There was nothing askew, after all.

Merely to be reassured, he approached the pink and pleasant Trudell next morning on the hearth-rug with a tentative "Well?"

"Sure enough," said Trudell, briskly. "I'd quite forgotten. Suppose we say the club—to-morrow—at three." Their eyes met; and Horry saw that there was, after all, something the matter with Penny Bond.

And, after all, Trudell put it in two words, curtly spoken.

"It's money," said he, and Horry, who had been fearing—he didn't know what—dropped back in the leather chair and expelled his breath in an incredulous "Money?"

AN HOUR BEFORE THE APPOINTED TIME HE WENT TO THE CLUB WHERE HE WAS TO MEET PENNY FOR LUNCHEON

"Money!" Trudell yapped it. "Of course, it's ridiculous that Pen should get himself into a fever when all he had to do was to call up any one of you—his connections—and ask for a million. Or, if he had any silly pride, he needed but to hint how business wasn't going—to look despondent and plead poverty—and you'd all have sent your cash boxes round next morning. Precisely!"

"I say, Tru'——" Horry whitened, angrily, as he sat straight.

"You shall say, in your turn, all that you wish," Trudell interrupted, "but I purpose relieving myself first." Horry sat back without a word. Trudell emphasized his points with a pink and polished forefinger. "Pen's mother," he snapped, "holds the keys to the coffers of the lamented Bond senior. Pen wasn't to be trusted with 'em. Pen was given a bally worsted business to play with and he set to making a living at it. Pen has juggled his assortment of troubles through one year, but he can't stagger through the deluge of 'please remits' that is due January first. Maybe his common sense is warped a bit—worry has that effect, at times, you know. But it seems such a paltry, ridiculous fizzling of affairs, don't you see? Not a dignified failure—and Pen has taken to jesting with the fates. Laughing at it! Which isn't a good sign."

Horry Remsen shot up from his chair to his full six feet and walked away, arms folded behind him. He went to the window, looked out on the motley of the street an instant, turned, came back and took his chair.

"Go on," he said.

"Reckon I've bit and clawed sufficient. You've taken it very well. As to your pearl necklace episode, I figure that Pen's flare was plain nerves and—hurt pride. He has a great deal of pride and carries it on the outside, where things are always rubbing up against it. I'm done."

Horry leaned forward, elbows on knees, and fitted the finger-tips of his strong, immaculate hands together painstakingly.

"If you have anything to suggest," he said, not looking up, "I wish you'd go ahead. And if—some time—you could make Pen see that I've been dense—not just careless—I'd be no end——"

"Sulphitic syzygy," hissed Trudell, profanely, "do you think I've talked it over with him?"

"You didn't?" At the tremendous relief in Horry's voice as he sat erect Trudell's peevishness lightened almost to a smile.

"Well! So that explains the tragic stalk about the room. Feeling hurt, eh? No, Pen hasn't favored me with his confidence. Part of this I knew, part I guessed. The business and bills part I—snooped for. I'd rather not let you know my source of information."

"Of course! Of course!" Horry was gratefully apologetic. "All I ask is that you tell me how we're to pull him out."

"I'm leaving at six," Trudell informed him, "for an interview with Mrs. Bond senior. She is at the latest thing in violet-ray, rose-bath 'cures,' where they have poets in to read their own effusions to slow music, fuddy-duddy Hindu gentlemen in petticoats to teach 'em to breathe like morning-glories and a perfectly too-utter, actor-faced curate to drop in at tea-time and condole with 'em over their struggle with existence. Fine! I'm intending to give her a reason for being there—which she hasn't now. I shall bully her into making over his rightful portion to Pen, or—I hate to tell you what I shall threaten her with. I've been bothered with this affair long enough."

Horry had a vision of Pen's silver-pompadoured, languid-mannered lady mother hounded in the very violet rays of her sanctuary by Trudell, and despite the gravity of the moment he chuckled before he came to argument.

"Afraid she won't do it, Tru'—she'll take refuge in the martyrdom of being misunderstood. You see, she wants to keep the money to endow charities and scholarships with her name hitched to 'em—that sort of thing. There's another way, though. If you could lie like a trooper—make her think that the Remsens wanted to make amends for their suspicions and were willing to let it come through her—oh, I can't see just how you're to put it, but she must understand that Pen is to be put on his feet at any cost! If it isn't at hers—I fancy she'll listen to reason. You see——"

He stopped and looked at Trudell, his handsome, boyish face flushing red. "Tru'—Olivia and I have a matter of—I don't know how much, but it's more than thirty millions, between us. And if one—or a dozen of 'em—could be put to some real use. When I think of Pen—good old Pen!—being run into a corner by—by butchers and bakers and candlestick-makers—it—— Great Lord, Tru'——"

"Precisely," said Billy Trudell.

All the day that was to bring Penny Bond his freedom from carking care Horry and Olivia were in a smother of excitement. Horry, overstrained, started for town in early afternoon, but had himself taken back from the station to tell Olivia that snow-clouds were piling up and a few flakes falling. She welcomed him as though he had been gone a twelvemonth.

"That's all we need to make things perfect—a Christmas-candy storm, and Pen happy, and we four together!" The stars in her night-time eyes glimmered through a mist as their hands clasped delightedly. "Horry—the very best gift we ever gave—or shall give—is this that none shall ever know we gave. Isn't it so?"

"You most beautiful thing on earth!" he answered irrelevantly.

They were in the nursery, abasing themselves at the feet of the monarch thereof, when Sue came for them—colorless, breathless. The conspirators exchanged an ecstatic glance as they rose to greet her. To their utter confounding, she spoke sharply—a tone never before heard from Sue.

"I thought you were going in town, Horry, to come out with Pen! Why didn't you—can't you get the next train in?"

"Why—what——" Sue's slim hands clasped and wrung at the question.

"I don't know what! Oh—I don't mean to be snappish, but I'm worried and I've got to tell—somebody. . . . It's Pen! He hasn't been himself for a long time. You haven't seen it, but I have. In a hundred ways. Yet, I've tried to wait—and hope. Just now he telephoned. What are you smiling at?"

"Was I?" asked Horry, mildly. "I didn't mean—— What did Pen say?"

"Horry—Olivia! If it's a joke—if you know anything—tell me! You don't know how I—— Pen asked me, just now, if I thought he was in his right mind—said he wanted to hear me speak to make sure he was awake. Then something about a golden shower that had rained on him——"

"Why, that's Pen's way of telling you he's had a piece of luck. I should think you'd know, by this time, that Pen laughs over good luck—and bad, Sue. There's nothing to worry over."

"Then why," demanded Sue, illogically, "do I feel this way?"

"You poor dear!" Olivia put a protecting arm about her. "You're having nerves—plain feminine nerves. . . . Horry's right; if it had been a thing to fret over, Pen wouldn't have 'phoned you. Come have a cup of tea, and then we'll make ourselves overwhelming for dinner. He'll be out early, for it's snowing. Remsen Bond, you've never seen a snow-storm, you blessed little man——" The magnitude of this new experience for the son of her soul brought Sue fluttering to take him to the window.

The car came back from the early train—the next and the next—without Pen. When Sue turned from the door at the third disappointment Horry went to the telephone and tried for Bond and Griscom's office. He got no reply. The superintendent of the building, finally brought to the other end, told them that Mr. Bond had dismissed his clerks early and left for home—as he supposed.

Horry began calling Trudell at every likely place.

It was after a half-dozen failures, while he was looking up other club numbers, that the house call rang. But it was not Trudell. It was a woman's—a girl's—voice! asking if Mr. Bond had reached home. Horry looked over his shoulder instinctively and saw Sue waiting—watching.

"No!" he barked, and hung up the receiver with a muttered word about "wrong number." Yet, when the call sounded again, after a brief interval, he answered, perforce, fearing it was the girl and that Sue would answer. "Please, listen," said the voice—clear and quiet. "I am Mr. Bond's stenographer. I have word from him that I must give to Mr. Trudell. Can you——"

"Mr. Trudell is not here. I don't know where he is. I'm trying for him. If I find him shall I——"

"He will be there on the next train, which is probably late," the voice interrupted. "I will call till I get him. Thank you."

With a mental shake to liven his thinking self, Horry turned and lied glibly from sheer pity as he met Sue's eyes.

"Pen's stenographer," said he, "and Pen and Trudell have been delayed and will be here on the next train. Something about business."

It was Olivia—Olivia who was never ill and who never lied—who got Sue upstairs on pretext of an alarming pain when Horry gave the signal that meant the car's return from the station. The chained tires crept up the drifted drive, the lights fighting foggily through the shrilling riot of white that but served to make the night's blackness more dense. Trudell sprang out before the spuming wheels stopped and ran up the steps—alone. They spoke rapidly.

"What's up, Tru'?"

"Don't know. Haven't you——"

"Not a word, except from a woman who says she's his stenographer and wants you and will ring again and—— There she is!"

Trudell was across to the instrument before the ring ceased, and as he heard a reply to his "hello" he took off his hat and held it in his hand while he listened and answered.

"I understand. . . . No! I hope you're right and I believe you are. . . . You've done wonderfully. . . . I will. Please take a cab home; it's not a night for you to be—eh . . . Er—no, you can do nothing more, thank you . . . don't worry—Good-bye!" He hung up the receiver, put on his hat again, absent-mindedly, and took it off finally, putting it aside.

"Nothing to do but wait," he answered Horry's look. "Pen closed the office early. He was tremendously excited, and had been—er—celebrating too much. She stayed around below and watched. He kept buying things and bringing them to the office in a taxi—and going after more. Finally started for the station. She left after 'phoning me that I'd better come out with him. I just made the rear car as the train pulled out—went through it—no Pen. If I missed him I was to let her know—but she beat me. On her way to dinner she saw him—in the taxi—headed the other way. She has an—intuition, I suppose you call it, that he's coming home in the machine. And now we——"

"Who," Horry asked, rapidly, "is this stenographer? How does she know——" Trudell looked up quickly, his eyes like opaque ice, and Horry recalled his taking off the hat as the girl telephoned. It had been instinctive, and all suddenly he knew his question to be a mistake.

"The young lady," Trudell said, quietly, "is the one to whom I went for enlightenment in this matter. I put the case—and our concern—before her, and she did me the honor to confide what she knew of the business entanglement. Her motive—needs no justification."

"Of that," Horry made amends with gravity, "I am sure. What are we to tell Sue?"

"Everything," she said, clearly, and stepped around the carved screen behind them. Her head was high, but she was white and her blue eyes burned black. . . . Horry counted the slish—slish—seven soft, silken sounds in the hush as she went to Trudell and put out her hand to him. He took it in both his own.

"I eavesdropped," she told him steadily. "I knew there was something wrong. I've heard all you've told Horry—I want to know all that has gone before. You must—one of you—tell me everything."

And Billy Trudell put her into a chair and told it her—wonderfully brief and gentle. Olivia came down, silently, and stood by Sue's side, a steadying hand on her shoulder. Horry listened, head turned away. And when she knew all Sue got to her feet, walked aside from them and stood alone—as her heart decreed she must stand when Pen could not share her grief—trying to bear it.

"I——" she broke out once. "To think I never guessed. I—of all——" But she did not cry, as Horry feared she would.

"There's one thing more," Trudell said. "The hardest of all. Pen must never know that you know. You mustn't pity him or let him see you unhappy or help him to tell you. Bread-and-butter-getting is a man's fight. If he knows that you know he failed—though he wasn't to blame—it'll hurt his self-respect, and that—you mustn't do. For his good and yours, he must think—always—that he weathered this alone. Don't let him tell you otherwise."

"I know, I know—I know him—and you're right. I can do it—you'll see. But now——" Her too bright eyes turned from one to the other, entreating. "Help me once more! Help me find him; get him here. I want him—to take care of. . . . I must have him home, I tell you!"

They got an auto map and began telephoning garages along the route the taxi would take—if it had started. . . . At the seventh garage they learned that a taxi—one man passenger—had stopped for gasolene and that the chauffeur had inquired the road to the colony. Horry did not speak till he had it all.

"It's Pen, right enough! Barring accidents, he'll be here in a half-hour." Sue leaned so heavily against the chair that it slid with her, and Trudell caught her.

Forty-five minutes later the taxi crawled and coughed and sputtered to the door. Billy Trudell was out, gave the chauffeur over to the second man and had Pen in to the hall fire before a sober man could have questioned his movements. From their darkened corner behind the screen the three hidden ones saw Pen; and Horry gave thanks, silently, that he was no worse than sleepy and chilled and dazed. They saw him look about expectantly.

"When did you come, Tru'?" he asked, without surprise. "I came home in a taxi. Foolish thing! Where's Sue?" Behind the screen she caught her breath and Olivia gripped her hand in warning.

"Gone to bridge party—all of 'em," Trudell explained glibly. "I wanted to laze around, so they left me. Heavens opened t'day, Tru', an' dropped manna. . . . If they hadn't—— But they did. I'm a rich man, Tru'. Can't tell y' any more—got t' tell Sue, first. . . . Say, did you ever see those long white bills the markets sen' in once a month? Must cost 'm a heap for paper. Items all down—show y' some time. Why doesn't Sue come?"

"About time," parried Trudell. "Have you such a thing as a highball, yonder?"

"I brought her two strings pearls," Penny went on, unheeding. "Fool of a good ol' Horry thought he was going t' give her pearls . . . been all right if I could—but heavens hadn't opened then, an' I couldn't. An' if I couldn't—he mustn't! You know how 'tis, Tru'."

"I know," said Trudell. "Let's go make a——" Penny came from his chair, wide awake.

"Tru'—where is she? Sue's here—I feel her! What you lyin' about? She——"

"In your own house," roared Trudell, "seems to me the least you can do is to be civil. Do I get a drink? Or don't I?"

"Why—I beg your——" Pen hesitated, frowning, uncertain; but Tru's hand on his arm turned him about even as his troubled eyes centered on the screen that hid her. The three in hiding were out instantly the hall was clear, wraps caught up, and were safely through the door. Sue ran on and out into the storm, catching up the damp snow, scrubbing it over her cheeks, her gown trailing through the clinging whiteness; then up and past them she hurried, and in.

"Pen——" she called, "Pen! I'm here!" He came, flinging the glass from his hand at sight of her!

"Your cheeks are wet," he said quickly, putting her away that he might see. She laughed up at him, brilliant, coquetting.

"I would run through the snow—I love it! And I'm wet—wet——" She put out her small satin shoe—damp and stained. The silken ankles and chiffons above were drabbled with wet. He took the turn she had meant him to take.

"Good gracious! You must put on dry things—Horry, what were you about, to let her do it? I don't like this—it's the first time you've failed to be here——"

"And the last—the very last," she promised. "But don't scold now—not till I'm dry; and you're coming up to take care of me, because I'm that weary!"

They were half way up the broad staircase when he remembered, and turned from his fond absorption in her to look back. "I say," he called, "you don't mind? It's late—and I've a lot t' tell her! Piece of luck—Chris'mas gift ahead of time." Something of the undercurrent of feeling touched him, for he lingered, smiling down. "Good folks," he nodded, "the three best ever! Good night you all!"

"Good night—good night." Sue called, and put out her hands to them, her face alight with what she might not utter, giving her heart in great gratitude and love and benediction. Olivia's eyes brimmed over and she could not answer; but Horry, his wife's hand tight in his, smiled back "Good night." And Billy Trudell said it, after him, in his usual impassive way; but his bent head, as he met Sue's eyes, was proud as that of the knight who receives his accolade.

The two went up, then, slowly. Horry put out his free hand.

"Shouldn't wonder, Tru', if Christmas were to be a merry morn—after all," he said.

WOMEN ARE TO CUT A FIGURE

Likely to Play Very Important Part in National Politics.

IT STARTS IN CHICAGO

Chicago, March 21.—The swish of the skirt is being heard in the 1912 campaign already in Chicago. County Judge J. E. Owen's order that the voters of Cook county be permitted to express their opinion on equal suffrage at the regular primaries, April 9, by dropping votes for or against it into ballot boxes which the women shall provide has become already much more than a mere Chicago affair. The women have started out on an aggressive, well organized campaign here to get the men to vote for woman's suffrage. But they have also started another movement. It is for a suffrage demonstration in Chicago that will make the two old parties pay heed. The general plans are to mobilize the forces here at the time of the republican national convention and to stage a parade that will make the big convention a mere side show. Some think that they can get fifty thousand women in line—probably more.

"We are preparing for a demonstration," said Dr. Anna Blount, last night, "but the plans will probably not be perfected for some time yet. It will either be on May 21, when the Mississippi valley woman's suffrage conference is held here, or during the republican national convention. But no matter when it is made, you can depend on it that the national conventions will know what the women want this year. We do not intend to be militant, but we will let the two conventions know that there are over one million women in this country this year who are to cast their ballots for president in November. It is probable that we will have our demonstration during the republican national convention—but Baltimore will not be slighted. As soon as we get our Chicago fight out of the way, on April 9, we will take up this other matter.

Good Chance for Effect.

"The national convention offers good opportunity for the demonstration. The women from the enfranchised states of California, Colorado, Washington, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming will be here then. No one knows exactly how many women are enfranchised now, but we will know and the banners will announce the exact figures then. There are at least a million and some of the figures indicate 1,300,000, while in suffrage speeches we talk about 1,500,000 women in this country having the ballot this year. At all events, there are enough of them to demand attention. With these women at the head of the line and the women from all other states falling in behind them, we should make an impression."

The leaders of the suffrage movement in Chicago, among them Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, a lawyer, Jane Addams, the social settlement worker, and Dr. Anna Blount, are nonmilitant. Whatever demonstration is planned for both Chicago and Baltimore will be sans bricks and slugs. They deplore Mrs. Belmont's statements about the use of guns and more forcible methods that the followers of Mrs. Pankhurst have adopted in Great Britain.

National Headquarters Idea.

"It has not yet been decided whether the women will open a national campaign headquarters this year or not," said Dr. Blount. "That will be another thing for us to take up at the Mississippi valley conference May 21. At that meeting also we will raise money and send a big delegation to Wisconsin to assist in the referendum of the question in that state. We may all go to Milwaukee and hold a demonstration there. The bill has been passed in that state and also in Kansas, Oregon and Nevada and has been placed before the voters on referendum. We have great hopes of carrying them all this fall, so you see there is more in this campaign for the women than the mere fight between republicans, democrats and socialists. Then, too, the matter is up before the constitutional conventions in New Hampshire and Ohio, and in Ohio—if my information is not incorrect—the committee has reported on it favorably.

"One of the interesting things of this campaign and our movement which many may not know," concluded Dr. Blount, "is that our canvasses and those of the secretary of state show that the women have fifty thousand to sixty thousand more votes in California this year than the men have. The women are organizing their own presidential campaign committees and we should hear from them and probably see them at both the Chicago and Baltimore national conventions."

BIG PROFITS IN FRUIT.

Commissioner of Horticulture Gives State of Washington Figures.

Spokane, Wash., March 21.—F. A. Huntley, state commissioner of horticulture says in a report just submitted to Governor Marion E. Hay, that of 238,786 acres of land devoted to fruit growing in the state of Washington, 229,854 is planted to apple, peach, plum, prune, apricot and cherry trees. Estimating the average annual yield at $8, 500,000 for the five years, he places the average value of land devoted to horticulture at $350 an acre, on an earning basis of ten per cent., which, growers say, is ultra-conservative.

The acreage devoted to strawberries is 2,532, with 400 acres in cranberries and 2,500 acres in grapes and 3,500 acres in other berries. More than 10,000,000 of a total of 14,078,182 fruit trees in the state are in eighteen counties east of the Cascade mountains, where intensive methods are practiced in the commercial orchards.

Spokane county heads the list in apple culture with 1,894,882 trees; Yakima county has 1,883,771 and Chelan county claims 1,281,581. Okanogan county is fourth with 847,535 and Stevens county has 324,676 trees.

MEALS THREE CENTS EACH.

Convicts at the Massachusetts State Prison Are Thus Served.

Boston, Mass., Mar. 21.—The high cost of living apparently has as little use for jails as those who are charged with responsibility for it. At any rate, Warden Benjamin F. Bridges, of the state prison at Charlestown, who feeds 832 unwilling guests three times a day, claims that it costs him exactly 3 cents a meal per man.

"There's some class to the menu here," said Warden Bridges, "and our guests thrive on what we give them. The food is always wholesome. I insist on a variety and see that it is properly cooked. I know the men are satisfied with what we serve them. And they show it is beneficial by the continued improvement in their condition."

DIVORCE COURT HIS TERROR.

So Iowan Contracted Trial Marriage and is Arrested.

Des Moines, Ia., March 21.—A trial marriage entered into to make it possible to shun divorce courts resulted in the arrest of W. H. Moon, 30 years old, and Josephine Mellenberg, 19.

The couple has been living together for six weeks. Moon told the police, and expected to continue to do so about six weeks longer, at the end of which time, if everything had gone well between them, they were to be married. Moon has such a horror of divorce courts that he decided to take a chance on a trial marriage, he explained.

The police officials tried to persuade Moon to marry the girl, but he refused to do so until his trial marriage scheme had been worked out. The young woman is detained in the matron's ward and Moon is out on bond.

ROOSTER SWALLOWS DIAMOND.

Surprised Man Recovered It When Wife Cleans Gizzard.

Spokane, Wash., March 22.—After reposing three months in an impromptu jewel case in the form of a chicken's gizzard, a three-quarter-karat diamond belonging to E. M. Reel, a motion picture machine operator of Spokane, was restored to its owner recently. Reel lost the gem, which is valued at $75, from its setting in a ring he wore last September, while working in the yard at his residence. The chicken, then a young Rhode Island red rooster, seized upon it as a choice morsel and swallowed it. Its digestive qualifications were too slight, however, for proper disintegration, and the diamond lodged in the gizzard.

In the meantime Reel gave up his search for the sparkler, concluding it was lost to him for all time. A few days ago he went to the henhouse and killed the rooster for dinner. Mrs. Reel was dressing the fowl when she found the missing diamond and now claims the proprietorship of the stone. Reel's solace was in the form of choice bits of the rooster after it was cooked.

DIES FOR "FORTUNE" TALE.

Lovelorn Girl Consults Soothsayer, Then Swallows Poison.

Allentown, Pa., March 22.—After a visit to a fortune teller, who could not give her any encouragement that she could get back her lover, William Sterner, with whom she had fallen out four years ago, Miss Mary A. Nagle, aged 28, a silk winder, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. She was motherless and had for years lived with Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kramer, who regarded her as a member of the family.

On returning home at night the girl was greatly depressed, explaining how the fortune teller's philters and potions had failed and that the casting of the horoscope had not given any hopeful sign.

When she intimated that she might drown herself, Mrs. Kramer tried to cheer her up. During the night, however, there were sounds of distress from Miss Nagle's room. The door was broken open and she was taken to the hospital, where all efforts to save her life proved futile.

Once before, soon after the tiff with her lover, she tried suicide by swallowing match heads and left a long letter, giving minute directions for her funeral.

March the Worst Month for This Trouble—How to Remove Easily.

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in March, but happily there is also a cure for these ugly blemishes, and no one need stay freckled.

Simply get one ounce of othine, double strength, from Meyer Bros. Co., and apply a little of it at night, and in the morning you will see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the light ones have vanished entirely. Now is the time to rid yourself of freckles, for if not removed now they will stay all summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Your money back if othine fails.

1912 Platform Adopted by the Indiana Democrats

We, the democratic party of Indiana, in convention assembled, renew our allegiance to the fundamental principles of democracy and declare our faith that only by a rigid adherence to the just doctrine of equal opportunity for all and special privilege to none, can the people be relieved of the burdens that oppress them.

We reaffirm our belief that the federal government is one of delegated powers and deny that those powers can be enlarged by legislative enactment or judicial construction.

Indorses Fight on Tariff.

We cordially indorse the record of our senators and representatives in congress, and especially approve of their firm and persistent efforts to remove the iniquities of the protective tariff system, as inflicted upon the country by the Payne-Aldrich act. This act is the latest republican expression in practice of the principle of protection. This principle, as applied in this and kindred prior acts of legislation, has hatched into life and nourished into strength a vast brood of monopolies and trade conspiracies, which rest as a deadly blight on industry and commerce. It has, through the artificial prices which it fosters, carried deprivation into millions of homes, and tended to produce conditions of unmerited opulence and undeserved poverty. It has worked false and fraudulent relations between capital and labor, passed the class spirit over society and produced an increasing ferment of unrest and discontent throughout the country. It has made merchandise of tariff legislation, projected the leprosy of corruption into the politics of the nation and sought, with the proceeds of the remorseless exactions which it authorizes, to debauch the citizenship which it has first impoverished.

This vicious perversion of the taxing power of the federal government multiplies upon the country the very mischiefs which all good government is designed to prevent. Against this evil and in correction of this abuse, we demand the application of the principle that custom house taxation, like other forms of taxation, shall be for public purposes only and not for private gain, that such taxation shall be limited to the actual necessities of the government, honestly, efficiently and economically administered and so levied as not to discriminate against any section, industry, class or occupation.

Legislature's Acts Approved.

We approve and indorse the record of the last democratic legislature of Indiana, and especially commend its efforts to secure the purification of the suffrage, and to provide better facilities for the prompt and speedy administration of justice. We warn the people that without honest elections, popular government is a sham and a delusion. The existing corruption of suffrage is notorious, notwithstanding the efforts of the democratic party to remove it, beginning with the Australian ballot law in 1889. The attainment of honest elections lies at the foundation of all other reforms and of all progress. The effort of the legislature to provide an opportunity for the people to vote on much needed reforms by the submission of a proposed new constitution has been arrested by a suit, which is now pending in the supreme court of the state. The democratic party awaits the determination of the questions involved in that suit with full confidence that the judicial branch of the government will discharge every duty imposed upon it.

We indorse the record of the last legislature for rational, progressive legislation. It ratified the income tax amendment to the federal constitution. It promoted honest elections by a general registration law and rigid corrupt practices and campaign publicity law. It did a long deferred act of justice by passing a liberal employers' liability law, which abolishes technical and unjust assumptions of contributory negligence, the fellow-servant rule and the workingmen's waiver of equal rights. It also passed a law for the weekly payment of wages by corporations and prohibiting the use of time and credit checks where money wages were due. It enlarged the powers of the railroad commission and empowered it to fix the rate of common carriers. Child labor laws were strengthened; a cold storage limitation was imposed; a standard of weights and measures was established; sanitary schoolhouses with medical inspection of pupils are required; the block signal was rendered obligatory on all steam and electric railroads; a bureau of inspection for factories, mines and boilers was established; a commission to advance agricultural and industrial education was formed; building and loan associations were brought under state control, and a system of uniform public accounting for all offices, large or small, throughout the state was perfected.

Pension Legislation.

We indorse the action of the present democratic house of representatives in passing the Sherwood pension bill, which we regard as a step in the right direction toward giving just relief to the surviving veterans of the civil war. We especially commend the Indiana democratic members in both houses for their strong an effective support of the bill.

We favor such amendments to the present primary election laws of Indiana as will insure the honest and fair selection of candidates to be voted for by the people.

We favor the enactment of such laws as will provide for the better and more economical construction, maintenance and control of our public highways.

The democratic party has always advocated the largest measure of liberty to the individual citizen, consistent with the public good. It still recognizes and believes in the old democratic principle of self-government. In the treatment of the temperance question the last democratic convention declared in favor of local option, making "incorporated cities, townships and the territories in townships outside of such cities the units of election," which principle and declaration we now reaffirm, and we commend the fidelity of the last democratic legislature in its redemption of that pledge, and in providing by law for a stricter regulation of the liquor traffic. We demand a rigid and impartial enforcement of the law, and we again declare against the repeal or modification of the present remonstrance laws.

For Mine Rescue Station.

We favor the establishment of a mine rescue station in Indiana, near the center of the coal fields, for the purpose of protecting the lives and properties jeopardized by fires, explosions and other coal mine accidents.

We favor the celebration of the centennial of the admission of Indiana to the union by the erection of a permanent memorial building, especially devoted to the preservation of the history of the state; both the written history, as gathered in the state library, and the unwritten, as gathered in a museum where the relics and evidences of the achievements of the citizens of the state, in war and peace, shall be open to the free inspection of all the people.

For the purpose of better protecting the people's rights and property in municipalities, we favor legislation requiring full publicity of all proposed franchise ordinances before the same are enacted.

We indorse the record of Governor Thomas R. Marshall, who has given the state the best administration it has known for years. Faithful to his oath of office, he has fully performed his duties without encroaching on the spheres of other departments or betraying the interests of the people for political purposes. Without attempting to dictate to the legislature, he has aided it in every beneficial step by his counsel and influence. Without attempting to dictate to the courts, he has had brought before them all questions for which attention was important to the public welfare.

Commendation of Marshall.

We especially commend his steps inaugurating judicial action for the conservation of the public lands and for reclaiming title for the state to the beds of streams officially declared navigable, which were not surveyed or sold by the United States, as a movement which makes possible the saving to the public resources of enormous value.

In all his official life he has proved himself a man of the highest integrity, of sound judgment and of unfaltering resolution in the performance of his duty. We commend him to the people of the United States as the type of man needed for the presidency; and instruct our delegates to the democratic national convention to present his name to that body as the first and only choice of the democracy of Indiana for the nomination of president.

Resolved, That the rooster shall be adopted as the emblem of the democratic party in Indiana.

ORGAN RECALLS MARK TWAIN.

Humorist Helped Earn Instrument Church Now Discards.

Carlisle, Pa., March 22.—The removal of the old organ from the Second Presbyterian church recalls the fact that it was purchased with funds raised by a lecture course in which Mark Twain held his audience in suspense by being half an hour late. Gen. Lemuel Todd, who had been assigned to introduce the humorist, was growing restless and everybody was fidgety.

When Twain at last stepped on the platform he did not give Gen. Todd an opportunity of presenting him. Merely nodding to Todd, Twain said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I understand that your esteemed townsman, Gen. Todd, has been asked to introduce me to you. However, as I know myself better than any one else, I believe I am better qualified to present myself."

Then he kept his audience in an uproar for more than two hours.

Absorption Process Makes Faces Young

(From The Home Maker.)

Success has at last come to scientists who for years have sought some method of removing the outer facial skin in cases of unsightly complexions, which would be both painless and non-injurious. The new process is so simple, so inexpensive, the wonder is no one had discovered it long ago.

It has been amply demonstrated that common mercolized wax (buy an ounce at any drug store) entirely removes, by gentle absorption, the withered, lifeless cuticle, showing the youthful, roselike skin beneath. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and washed off in the morning. The absorption also cleanses clogged pores, increasing the skin's breathing capacity and capillary circulation, preserving tone, color and natural beauty of the new skin.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

MAY IRWIN COMING

In Her New Comedy, "She Knows Better Now."

That exuberantly mirthful person, May Irwin, is coming to town and there's rejoicing among the hypochondriacs, the downcast business man and others who need a cheer or two in their run down systems. For this is the very person who is regarded as "the funniest woman in the world." She will be seen at the Majestic theater Tuesday night. This season Miss Irwin is appearing in a new comedy with music described as a farcical satire, and called, "She Knows Better Now." It was written by a native of Boston, Miss Agnes Crimmins, a graduate of Radcliffe college.

May Irwin has made a very large fortune in the task of making people laugh. Judging from her great success in her life work, it would seem that she was surely put upon the earth with a mission. "Blessed is mirthfulness," said Henry Ward Beecher. "It is one of the renovators of the world; men will let you abuse them if you make them laugh." And who will say that the gift of making humanity laugh and making its burden lighter, is meaner than the genius that makes books or invents machines that fly.

"She Knows Better Now," the new medium to exploit Miss Irwin's genial personality this season, is said to be much better in dramatic structure than have been her vehicles of other years. The new comedy concerns the adventures of two New York women of wealth and social prominence, who become almost disastrously involved in an affair with the United States customs officers. A near German nobleman also is grotesquely involved in difficulties, some of his own incubation and others that were more or less thrust upon him by the prominent and respectable society matron whom Miss Irwin will impersonate. There is a tender vein of sentiment that runs smoothly and consistently through many funny situations into which Miss Irwin has injected her happy personality and her best art. The company includes Arthur Byron, E. E. Hohenwart, Lionel Glenister, Thomas Fallon, Muriel Hope, Mary Taylor and Kathryn Kays.

TO SAVE OLD MILL ON BATTLEFILD

Was Station Where the Fleeing Slaves of South Stopped.

SPOT IS HISTORICAL

Carlisle, Pa., March 22.—With the approach of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg and the national celebration that is being planned, hope is expressed here that the old and crumbling McAllister grist mill, which during the civil war was an important station of an "underground railroad" system, may be preserved for its historical value. Occupying a site about ten miles north of the Mason and Dixon line in Adams county, it is a constant reminder to Theodore McAllister of the days before the war when he, with his brothers, furnished the main outlet to the north for fugitive slaves. In those days southerners stationed spies along the highways leading into Southern Pennsylvania to inform on fugitives, and many northern homes were threatened for assisting slaves in their flight; but the McAllisters never heeded them.

Once a slave reached the old mill his safety was practically assured, for pursuers were never able to find an entrance to the passage. Opposite the mill is a hill covered with cedar and scrub pine trees, and on the east slope there is a rocky cavern called Wind Cave. Slaves crossed the creek at the mill and here the bloodhounds would lose the trail. Some hid among rocks in the cave, while others were concealed beneath the overshoot and water wheel in the mill. Under cover of night they were hurried north over a certain trail.

Theodore McAllister was a cavalry scout in the First battalion, Maryland home guards.

When General Meade called for scouts who were acquainted with Southern Pennsylvania, Theodore McAllister volunteered to go alone and locate the confederate army, but William A. McIlhenny, a boyhood friend of McAllister, insisted on accompanying him. The two got within rifle shot of the southern troops and were seen by them, and only through the fleetness and freshness of their mounts did they escape. It was ther eport they brought back that decided Meade to advance to Gettysburg.

After the war the old mill passed into decay, and crumbling walls are all that now remain.

GET YOUR STOMACH FIXED RIGHT AND YOUR MEALS WILL TASTE GOOD

If your meals don't taste right, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which affects you; if what little you eat lies heavy on your stomach; if you have difficulty in breathing after eating, eructions of sour, undigested food and gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and avoid your food from souring.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal, interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of stomach trouble, sick headache, biliousness, constipation, griping, etc. our case is no different—you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing an unhealthy condition.

A bottle of Cooper's New Discovery will bring relief and it will only take a few doses to do it.

Go right to your druggist and secure a bottle, take three doses—one before each meal—and if you truly don't feel the immediate benefits, simply return the bottle to the druggist and get your money back. After taking a full bottle there will be no traces of stomach trouble. For sale by Dreier Drug Co.

PENNSYLVANIA RETIRED LIST

Men Whose Aggregate Service is 179 Years to Be Pensioned.

EACH IS NEARLY SEVENTY YEARS OLD

E. Arter Secures Contract for Mayflowers Mills' Sidings.

Today action looking towards placing four employes of the Pennsylvania company whose aggregate service amounts to 179 years on the pension list is in progress. Dr. R. F. Price, of Terre Haute, and Dr. A. B. Truver, of Columbus, with Dr. E. F. Wagner, of Fort Wayne, all medical examiners for the Pennsylvania Voluntary Relief association, are examining the men today and no doubt will recommend that they be placed on the retired list. They are: Conductor Sylvester McMahon, who began work as a freight brakeman in November, 1863, was promed to freight conductor in April, 1868, and passenger conductor in April, 1872; Philip Titus, who began work as a fireman in May, 1870, and was promoted to Engineer, December 1, 1875; Martin Stafford, who began work as a fireman in April, 1874, and was promoted to engineer December 8, 1877, and Frederick Tegtmeyer, who began work in the boiler shop in 1862, when he was 16 years old, and worked there constantly until eight or ten months ago, when he was taken ill. Noen of these men will work any more and it is presumed they will be placed on the retired list April 1.

WAS NEVER SUSPENDED.

Remarkable Record of Conductor W. R. Wherry.

A remarkable personal record in railroading has just been completed by William R. Wherry, a Pennsylvania railroad passenger conductor, who will be retired on March 22, at the age of 67, after fifty years of active service. In this period he was never suspended or disciplined in any manner.

Mr. Wherry was born in Cambria county, Pennsylvania, March 22, 1845, and when 17 years old was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad company as a freight brakeman. One promotion followed another until he was made a passenger conductor on the Pittsburg division, where he is employed at the present time.

The record of this passenger conductor, who is the type of man the Pennsylvania railroad puts in charge of its trains, is given in a unique way in a letter written by him to his superintendent. He stated:

"I have now been running a passenger train for almost forty-six years and in that time have never had a serious accident, never had a passenger seriously injured or killed, have never been fined or suspended, always got along well with the traveling public, was never reported by a passenger that I heard of, and never was the cause of any law suits, which, when you consider the number of people of all kinds I have handled, is a wonder. It has always been my aim to do everything in my power to take my train over the division safely, and I have always held the company's interests first and have been loyal to it. I have never been seriously injured, but have had some very narrow escapes, having fallen between freight cars, was knocked down by an engine and squeezed between cars."

EXPLAINS THE REDUCTION.

Grand Trunk Officials Tell Why Wages Were Cut.

The Grand Trunk railroad has issued a statement explaining the decrease in the wages of its conductors, brakemen and baggagemen employed on branch lines. This decrease is to take effect on April 1 and amounts in some cases to $50 per month from the present scale. The statement shows that only 151 trainmen will be affected by the revision of the pay rolls. Undiscriminating and general application of new rules and rates of pay granted by the road in 1910 and also in January of this year, the statement says, brought about unequal and inconsistent results, some individuals on the light traffic branch runs getting advances as high as 88 per cent, while the men on main-line heavy-traffic runs received much smaller increases. This condition the road believes is unjust to them and makes a readjustment necessary.

WABASH TO USE TELEPHONES.

Will Put Up 1,600 Miles of Copper Wire in 1912.

According to information received the Wabash will this year do a great deal in the way of telephonizing the several lines that go under its name. It is said that about 1,600 miles of copper wire will be strung between Decatur and Detroit, St. Louis and Moberly, and St. Louis and Chicago. This wiring will be exclusively for the use of telephones, which will be used for the purpose of operating the trains. The amount that was authorized for the work was $100,000, but it is said that the work can be done at a figure of about $15,000 under this.

FREIGHT DEPOT BURNED.

Wabash Suffers Big Loss in Toledo by Fire.

The big freight house of the Wabash railroad at Toledo was partially destroyed by fire yesterday morning, involving a loss of many thousands of dollars. The building was used for the purpose of storing freight which had been unloaded from vessels on Lake Erie or which was to be loaded in those vessels, and was 300 feet in length and fifty feet wide. It was a frame structure and had been built many years. The entire west half of the building was destroyed before the Toledo fire department got the blaze under control. The origin of the fire is unknown and the amount of damages sustained cannot at this time be properly estimated.

ARTER GETS CONTRACT.

Will Excavate for Foundation for Mayflower Mills.

Ephriam Arter, the contractor, has secured the job of excavating for the two spur tracks from the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad to the site of the Mayflower mills, near the Nickel Plate tracks. The contract involves the removal of upwards of 4,000 yards of dirt and is one of the largest of its kind awarded this year. The spurs will be 800 feet long and work on the excavation will begin as soon as the frost leaves the ground.

BOILERMAKER INJURED.

While at work inside a firebox at the Wabash shop yesterday afternoon A. L. Phillips sustained a badly sprained arm in a peculiar manner. The tap of the air motor drill operated by a man on the outside of the boiler came through and caught in the sleeve of Mr. Phillips' working jacket and before the fabric gave way his arm was twisted about and badly sprained. Dr. Knadt, the company's surgeon, attended the injured man.

WILL START CHICKEN FARM.

W. S. Slater, the Pennsylvania passenger conductor who was placed on the pension list several weeks ago, accompanied by his wife, is now en route to California, where he will remain two or three years. Mr. Slater has paid considerable attention to chickens during his life and will engage in chicken raising for the market in California. He has leased his handsome residence property in the southern part of the city.

H. G. Allgeier, who resigned a position with the Hanna-Brackenridge company a few days ago, took employment with the Pennsylvania yesterday. He is an assistant clerk in Foreman H. T. Hogan's office at the machine shop. Machinist Leonard Wright and F. D. Morgan and Machinists' Helper C. J. Hope also found employment at the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

New Theory of Disease

New York Press.

A German professor of chemistry of no fame or prominence, but conceded a most learned man and student, advances a strange theory of disease. He claims that there is but few diseases, and that nearly all chronic or nervous disorders are due to a derangement of the metabolism of the body. Metabolism is a medical word meaning the "renewal of and the decaying of the minute cellular tissues which go to make up the body. After arriving at this theory he, practical German that he was, proceeded to prove it by formulating a nerve food and cellular tissue builder, which would restore the metabolism to its natural action. It is claimed that nearly all chronic and nervous disorders are promptly corrected by the use of this prescription, which is not inaptly named, metabolinum. Persons suffering with nervousness, anemia, weakness, debility and stamina are quickly transformed to vigorous health by this unique discovery. Some go so far as to say that it will completely kill the patent medicine industry. Already a large number of physicians prescribe metabolinum, and the most up-to-date pharmacy in all the large cities have it, and while it is rather expensive, one bottle is said to often make the greatest transformation in one's health. Evidence is given to show that actors, actresses, singers, musicians, senators and other public men and women are now disposed to drink the fluid, which contains no alcohol or narcotic drugs, having found that it does correct metabolism, sustain the nervous system, overcome anemia, inertia and a long train of so-called incurable ills. It is usually sold on prescription, but anyone can get it as it can not be called a drug or medicine, and is never advertised.

HARD TRIP WITH AN INJURED BOY

Parents Drag Him Three Miles on Sled—Then Drive 25 Miles.

HAD A BROKEN ARM

Portland, Ore., March 16.—After having been dragged on a bobsled by his father and mother alternately three miles through the snow to the nearest neighbor and then driven in a buggy 25 miles to the nearest railway station, Martin Reh, five years old, lies on a cot at St. Vincent's hospital with a broken arm.

The youngster lives with his parents on a homestead in the Coast Range mountains, twenty-eight miles from Hillsboro. While playing about in the snow near his home he accidently slipped and broke his left arm in the fall.

The storm had visited that section in all its severity; the day was bitter cold, the snow several feet deep, and the nearest neighbor lives three miles away. The father and mother of the child improvised a bobsled and, placing the injured mite of humanity upon it, braved the fury of the storm and trudged through the snow with their burden to their neighbor's home.

There the boy was placed in a buggy and driven to Hillsboro, the mother accompaning him. The accident occurred about 8:30 o'clock in the morning, and it was late in the evening when the child reached the hospital.

Two other victims of the storm were reported at St. Vincent's hospital. They are Dominic Fiolin of 124 Knott street and R. Wright, of 565 East Madison street, laborers, both of whom slipped at their homes and sustained broken ankles.

THE ART OF GIVING AND RECEIVING

ANY ordinary, civilized human being knows perfectly well from his own experience of the world that giving is better than receiving, better in itself, and more comfortable in its after effect.

Even children, the most perfect of barbarians, know it, unless their training has been disastrously wrong. You can certainly make a child pleased by giving it something, but that pleasure is scarcely to be compared with the pleasure the child feels when it has given you something.

And so it is through life. Not the saints only, but positively selfish people understand the value of giving—time, trouble, money, anything which can be given. They know all about it without any exhortations. The real trouble is not to persuade us to give; it is the exact opposite—to persuade us to be ready to receive, and to teach us to do it well.

For the givers, the reckless, incurable givers, are frequently unwise and embarrassing in their giving. Filled with the zeal for conferring benefits, they scatter their gifts of all kinds in a fashion which positively distresses those who receive them.

BURIAL OF POOR TO BE DISCUSSED

Township Trustees Will Meet in Assembly Room of Court House.

MANY SUBJECTS UP

A meeting of all township trustees of Allen county will be held tomorrow morning in the assembly room of the court house and a number of very important questions will be presented for discussion. Trustee Henry E. Branning, of Wayne township, will preside.

Among the principle topics to be discussed will be the question of burying the poor of the county. Undertakers declare that they have not been receiving enough money from the county for this work and an effort will be made to have a certain price adopted by every township. Heretofore prices have varied considerably. Henry E. Banning, jr., has written to other counties of the state and has prepared resolutions to be presented to the trustees tomorrow regarding the matter.

The school enumeration, which will be taken the first of next month, will also be discussed at some length, as will the proposition on foot in certain sections of the state, to get a bill through the next session of the legislature abolishing the present system of school fund distribution. The proposition being forwarded is to have the state tuition based on the average daily attendance. At this date it is not known how the trustees of Allen county stand on this matter, but some definite decision will be reached at today's meeting.

TO BE BURIED ABROAD.

The body of Ferdinand Meier, of this city, whose death occurred in Germany, will be buried in the fatherland. Word was received in this city from the American consul at Bad Naulheim, Germany, that it would be practically impossible to bring the body back to this country for burial. Henry Keller, administrator for the estate of Mr. Meier, was informed that a private coach would have to be engaged in which to take the body, entailing a cost of nearly $2,000, if the body is removed from Germany.

In migration some of the tiniest birds are the best travelers.

Millions of Folks Use Only Cascarets

They Never Have Headache, Biliousness, Sluggish Liver or Bowels or a Sick, Sour Stomach.

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish intestines—you always get the desired results with Cascarets and quickly, too.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable another moment; put an end to the headache, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour, gassy stomach, backache and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the poison and effete matter which is producing the misery.

Take a Cascaret now; don't wait until bedtime. In all the world there is no remedy like this. A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. No more days of gloom and distress if you will take a Cascaret now and then. All druggists sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too. adv

HAS FORTY-NINE STEPMOTHERS.

San Francisco, March 22.—L. B. Kidwell, who went to the Philippines in 1898 as a volunteer and now is known as the "lumber king" of the islands, arrived here from the orient on visit to his old home in Texas. With him is a young titled Moro named Abdula Piang, who is the son of a powerful datto of Mindanao, and who has forty-nine stepmothers and thirty-three brothers and sisters.

Owing to his friendship with the Moro chief, Kidwell has been able to go unarmed into the wildest parts of the island where he built up his hardwood industry. The financial arrangement, according to Kidwell, is both simple and satisfactory, the chief taking "whatever is right."
